CHARITY HOSPITAL

A New Orleans Legend

Charity Hospital embraces an intriguing and colorful past, and has served a real purpose. It is steeped in Louisiana history, and has survived difficult times and some of the worst political squabbles and patronage problems in the country, enduring for over 250 years.

Its charter dates back to January 1736, when Jean Louis, a French sailor, bequeathed his estate to the founding and furnishing of Charity Hospital in early French colonial Louisiana. This makes it the oldest continually operating hospital in what is now United States territory. (Bellevue Hospital in New York City was established two months after Charity.)

Within ten years, it became necessary to build a new building to replace the overcrowded original structure. The new hospital was conveniently located between a canal, for receiving patients and supplies, and a cemetery, for dispatching the deceased.

In 1779 a great hurricane wreaked havoc on New Orleans, reducing Charity to ruins. But once again Charity rose from the ashes, only to fall yet another time. In 1809, a kitchen fire quickly spread to the wooden shingle roof and burned the entire hospital to the ground. The indigent sick were housed in the Cabildo until the hospital could be restored. Five years after the fire, a new hospital was completed with facilities "vast and commodious, capable of caring for 120 patients."

A group of citizens visiting Charity in 1818 were horrified by the condition of patients, and complained to the governor and Hospital administration. They noted the hospital's filthy condition and total inadequacy of attendants. New facilities were again needed. In 1833, the fourth version of Charity was completed at a cost of $149,570. With the arrival of the Daughters of Charity and the new Medical College of Louisiana, the overall medical atmosphere in New Orleans was excellent. The entire medical complex was, at that time, very likely one of the best of its kind in the world.

Charity weathered the Civil War, and prospered during the remainder of the Eighteenth Century. By 1900, the hospital probably contained almost 2,000 beds. Other hospitals in the city had perhaps only 150 beds combined, including the larger ones such as Touro and Hotel Dieu with 50 or 60 beds each.

Middle: An open ward of the early 1800's.

Bottom: The population of New Orleans increased almost 30-fold between 1832 and 1926, while Charity's bed capacity had less than doubled. It was during that time that the hospital was forced to place two patients to a bed, and sometimes even a third patient on a lower mattress near the floor.

Bottom, right: Sister Stanislaus (1865-1949), former Mother Superior of the Daughters of Charity. She, and many others of her order, formed the backbone of the nursing staff in the early days of Charity.

Below: The first ambulance service at Charity was inaugurated in 1885. Charity interns would ride in the ambulances as they responded to their calls, until the practice was halted in the 1960's.

As World War I was coming to a close in 1918, a new war was just beginning, that between the School of Medicine and Hospital Administrators. The worst was yet to come as Huey P. Long's administration assumed power. After Long was elected in 1928, he immediately reorganized the Board of Administrators and replaced the Superintendent with Dr. Arthur Vidrine. In 1930, Long abruptly dismissed Dr. Alton Ochsner allegedly because of Ochsner's complaints about political constraints placed on his attempts to build a first-rate Surgery Department at Tulane. This feud, along with the failure of Tulane to award Long a law degree that he desired, quite possibly played a role in the establishment of the Louisiana State University Medical School at that time.

It had been clear for many years that the Charity Hospital building, then 100 years old, again needed to be replaced. Following Long's assassination in 1935, federal funds became available to build the current Charity Hospital, completed on June 27, 1939.

After World War II, problems involving interrelationships developed not only for Charity, but also for the medical schools. The Ochsner Clinic had emerged as a large medical institution, employing many of Tulane's faculty and developing its own residency training programs. The Veterans Administration Hospital also developed a residency program that further competed with Charity. With the rise of LSU Medical School, the old controversies between Tulane and Charity were now simply extended to it as well.

In the late 1950's many sweeping changes were considered for Charity and its associated schools. In the 1960's the ugly matter of segregation was faced and the "colored" and "white" wards that were on separate sides of the hospital were eliminated.

By the late 1960's financial problems for the Hospital and both schools were paramount, particularly as Tulane was increasing its residency affiliations with hospitals other than Charity. The tight money situation at Charity was having an adverse affect on the "lifeblood" of the institution, its intern and residency programs.

Woefully inadequate financing continued at Charity, however, and the hospital lost its accreditation on several occasions since 1975. This threatens not only Charity, but both medical schools and the entire medical education process.

While plans for problem solving are being developed, the question remains: "Is Charity a 19th century anachronism, or can it be properly funded and equipped to provide excellent care and teaching opportunities as it has in the past?" Although the future cannot be accurately predicted, one can only hope that future administrations will act favorably on initiatives to improve the relatively poor state of affairs. that currently exists

TULANE MEDICAL SCHOOL

The Tulane University School of Medicine had its beginning as the Medical College of Louisiana in September 1834, as three brash young physicians, all less than 26 years of age, initiated medical education in Louisiana. Establishment of the school was met with considerable opposition from the Creoles, whose ideas concerning medical education were based on the European system that stressed academics well-grounded in the Latin and Greek classics. Nonetheless, the Medical College opened its doors in January 1835. In doing so, it became the first medical school in the Deep South, and the fifteenth in the country.

There were only eleven students in the first class. Tuition, fees, room and board came to a total of less than four hundred dollars a year. The first few years were difficult ones. Deans seemed to come and go every year and there were many abrupt faculty changes, but still the school survived. By 1843 there were over one hundred students. Even then, diversity characterized the student body. Members of the class came from Alabama, Mississippi, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Connecticut, and Louisiana.

Medical school in those early days was much different that it is today. One needed at attend only eight months of lectures to receive an M.D. degree. The school year was four months long, with the second year being identical to the first. The same seven courses were repeated over again. The curriculum consisted of courses in Anatomy and Physiology, Chemistry, Materia Medica, Principles and Practice of Medicine, Surgery, and Obstetrics and the Diseases of Women and Children. Professors received no salary per se. They were compensated instead by selling tickets to their lectures to medical students. The instruction in the early days was wholly didactic. Practical teaching was given only in Anatomy. The lectures were delivered to the entire student body assembled in a large room or amphitheater. Clinical subjects were taught in the same manner. Indeed, the unmotivated students would often graduate without ever having attended a delivery, without ever having observed an operation, and often without ever having examined a patient.

The Civil War brought to a halt all formal medical training in 1862. The Medical College of Louisiana was fortunate to find financial security. A wealthy New Orleans merchant, Paul Tulane, bequeathed $1,250,000 to provide for a new university. In 1884 the various departments of the University of Louisiana were placed under the jurisdiction of the new institution, Tulane University.

In 1910, Abraham Flexner published his report on the ranking and classification of Medical schools, with Tulane ranked as one of the top three Southern institutions. At that time, Tulane's prominent faculty included such physicians as Dr. Rudolph Matas, a vascular surgeon, and Isadore Dyer, a well noted dermatologist who was instrumental in the development of the leprosarium in Carrville, Louisiana.

In 1913 Tulane boasted a School of Pharmacy, School of Dentistry, School of Medicine, and Graduate School of Medicine. (Only the latter two remain today). In 1958, the School of Public Health was established.

The Tulane Medical Center was organized in 1969 to broaden Tulane's commitment to medical education, research, and patient care. The Tulane Medical Center Hospital and Clinic, the first such university hospital in Louisiana, was dedicated in October 1976. This 300-bed hospital has enabled Tulane to consolidate a wide range of services in a tertiary-care environment. In the short time since its opening, it has become a major referral center for the region.

Since its founding 157 years ago as the Medical College of Louisiana, the Tulane University School of Medicine has undergone many changes, and not simply in name. Several buildings have come and gone, and while many different students and faculty members have occupied these buildings, so have federal troops during the Civil War. Though Tulane originally catered to those mainly from the South, it now attracts students from all parts of the United States. From its meager beginnings in 1834 with 11 students, the Tulane University School of Medicine has gone on to confer over 12,000 medical degrees, 138 of which are to be conferred on the Class of 1991. Paul Tulane would certainly be proud of the many physicians who have graduated from the university bearing his name.

THE BIG 3

We want to bid a fond farewell to three men who had a significant impact on our first year of Medical School. Drs. Edward Peebles, Robert Vaupel, and Leon Walker retired during our tenure at Tulane. They spent a combined total of 103 years teaching Anatomy. No longer will students learn about fishing or the reason Life-savers have holes from Dr. Walker; why we use the term "Scaphalocephaly" instead of "Boath-ead" from Dr. Peebles; or the ability to differentiate the esophagus from the vagina from Dr. Vaupel. The word "identify" will no longer ring through room 7072. We will remember you always.

The Class Of 1991

There are 138 students in the graduating class of 1991. We represent 27 different states and territories, plus 2 foreign countries. Though the greatest number of us come from Louisiana, 75% of our class comes from outside the state, with 24% from California followed by Florida with 9%. 23 members of the class obtained their undergraduate degrees from Tulane (3 even went to LSU). The rest went to schools varying from Ole Miss to Harvard, Johns Hopkins to UCLA, and many more in between. In choosing a class, the administration wanted one that was representative of all walks of life and cultures --- this has been accomplished with the Class of 1991.

Whose woods these are I think I know?

Who is rich? He who is happy with his lot.

Doctors and teachers of my past ... I thank you all for making me what I am today.

May all the members of my class find their happiness. May we stay friends forever.

COMES THE DAWN

After a while you learn the subtle difference
Between holding a hand and chaining a soul,
And you learn that love doesn't mean leaning
And company doesn't mean security,
And you begin to learn that kisses aren't contracts
And presents aren't promises,
And you begin to accept your defeats
With your head and your eyes open,
With the grace of a woman or a man,
Not with the grief of a child,
And you learn to build all your roads
On today, because tomorrow's ground
Is too uncertain for plans, and futures have
A way of falling down in mid-flight.

After a while you learn that even sunshine
Burns if you get too much.
So you plant your own garden
And decorate your own soul
Instead of waiting
For someone to bring your flowers.

And you learn that you really can endure...
That you really are strong
And that you really do have worth.

And you learn and learn...
With every goodbye, you learn.

Most of what I really need to know about how to live and what to do and how to be, I learned in kindergarten. Wisdom was not at the top of the graduate-school mountain, but there in the sandpile at Sunday School. These are the things I learned:

Share everything.

Play fair.

Don't hit people.

Put things back where you found them.

Clean up your own mess.

Don't take things that aren't yours.

Say you're sorry when you hurt somebody.

Wash your hands before you eat.

Flush.

Warm cookies and cold milk are good for you.

Live a balanced life---learn some and think some and draw and paint and sing and dance and play and work every day some.

Take a nap every afternoon.

When you go out into the world, watch out for traffic, hold hands, and stick together.

Be aware of wonder.

A SAGE ONCE SAID

Stood there boldly/ Sweatin' in the sun
Felt like a million/ Felt like number one
The height of summer/ I'd never felt that strong
Like a rock

I was 18/ Didn't have a care
Working for peanuts/ Not a dime to spare
But I was lean and/ Solid everywhere
Like a rock

My hands were steady/ My eyes were clear and bright
My walk had purpose/ My steps were quick and light
And I held firmly/ To what I felt was right
Like a rock

LIKE A ROCK

And I stood arrow straight/ unencumbered by the weight
Of all these hustlers and their schemes
I stood proud - I stood tall/ High above it all
I still believed in my dreams

20 years now/ where'd they go?/ 20 years/ I don't know
I sit and I wonder sometimes/ Where they've gone
And sometimes late at night/ When I'm bathed in the firelight
The moon comes callin' a ghostly white/ And I recall, I recall

Like a rock - Standin' arrow straight
Like a rock - Chargin' from the gate
Like a rock - carryin' the weight
Like a rock

Like a rock - The sun upon my skin
Like a rock - Hard against the wind
Like a rock - I see myself again
Like a rock

Dr. Nichols

... Diversity In Medicine

Dr. Ronald Lee Nichols serves as Henderson Professor, Vice-Chairman of the Department of Surgery, and Associate Professor of Microbiology. A graduate of the University of Illinois School of Medicine, Dr. Nichols has become world-renowned for his creation of the "Nichols Prep," used as antibiotic prophylaxis in abdominal surgery. However, in recent years, he has become an authority on medical-legal principles. Dr. Nichols' knowledge of Microbiology, Surgery, and legal issues, puts him in great demand as a lecturer nation-wide. His pleasant and entertaining teaching skills have made him a favorite among students. As a result, he has been the recipient of several Owl Club Awards. This year, the Class of 1991 is fortunate enough to have Dr. Nichols as our sponsor, the eighth time he has served a graduating class in this capacity. Dr. Nichols, we thank you for it all!

CONGRATULATIONS GRADS

Children's Hospital congratulates the graduates of the Tulane University School of Medicine.

Many of you have completed clinical rotations at Children's Hospital in pediatrics, pediatric subspecialties, pediatric rehabilitative medicine, pediatric orthopaedics, pediatric surgery, pediatric surgical subspecialties, pediatric radiology and in a host of other areas. We have been delighted to have you be a part of Children's Hospital and to see how a union of the Children's Hospital with the private practicing community and its affiliate institutions, Tulane University and Louisiana State University, has made us a most dynamic and growing force in pediatric care in the State of Louisiana and the entire Gulf Coast area. We look forward to continued growth, and we are certain that many of you will be a part of that growth.

As your residencies and fellowships progress we hope that many of them will be done in part here and that we will have the opportunity to watch you grow professionally. We hope that you will be frequent visitors and learn of the resource of our Children's Hospital in the New Orleans and Louisiana community.

Congratulations for much happiness and fulfillment in the future.

EDITORS' NOTE

We have tried to bring all of you a small piece of your lives, one which we hope you will remember fondly in the years to come. Each one of you brought something special to this class, and we tried to capture that in the photographs presented. Again we want to thank everyone whose assistance and advice brought this yearbook to life. We wish all of you luck, fortune, and low malpractice premiums in the future.
