Wm. O. Rogers.

Wm. O. Rogers was born in the city of New York, April 12, 1825.

He was prepared for college at the academy of Charles Bartlett, College Hill, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., entering the New York University as a Freshman in 1845.

At the close of his Sophomore year, he left and went to Williams College in Massachusetts, being attracted there by the fame of its president, Mark Hopkins. Here he spent his Junior and Senior years.

While at New York University, he became a member of the Delta Chapter of Psi Upsilon fraternity.

On account of ill health, he was in 1848 obliged to come South.

At the breaking out of the Civil War Mr. Rogers cast his lot with the South and served the country of his adoption with honor and distinction as commissary; under orders from the Commissary General at Richmond he was associated with Colonel Broadwell and Major Dameron, and was for a time stationed at Jackson, Miss., but was frequently sent to other places on missions of great delicacy and importance.

After the war, he was made Chief Superintendent of Public Schools, being the first returned Confederate placed in office. He was named by Mr. Paul Tulane as one of the administrators of the estate given by him for the endowment of Tulane University, and served on the board until 1885, when he resigned the office of Superintendent of Public Schools to become Secretary of the University, a position which he has held ever since to the delight of a grateful student-body and the loyal Alumni.

In 1886 Mr. Rogers received from the University of Ohio, the oldest of the Western universities, the honorary degree of L. L. D.

He was a member of the Board of Directors of the Public Schools of New Orleans from 1885 until 1896, serving as vice president, chairman of committee on High Schools and chairman of committee on teachers. One of the largest and finest of the new school houses constructed by the city has been named the William O. Rogers School, in commemoration of his services in connection with the public schools.

Such is the public life of the Hon. Wm. O. Rogers, a man among men, rich in honors and of well-merited distinction.

But it is in his private life and in his daily dealings with us in his capacity of Secretary of this great University, that we, the students know and love him best.

He is our excellent good friend, the possessor of infinite tact and patience, and ready to aid us with advice and wise counsel at all times.

Simple, kind, and true-hearted, leading us on to better things by his every word and deed, it is no wonder the new classes hail him with gladness and the older men part from him with sorrow in their hearts.

It is with fear and trembling that we, the foster parents of young JAMBALAYA, undertake to accept from our most worthy predecessors the guidance and training of this vigorous youth.

But however much we may feel ourselves unworthy of our predecessors, and inadequate to the task in hand, we do feel some degree of pride and interest in the young scamp himself, and in the result of our peculiar training.

Therefore do we present to you the Fifth Annual to aid in spreading the name and fame of Tulane University.

Class History of 1900.

DEEDS speak louder than words, and the poor historian of nineteen hundred feels constrained to let her deeds speak for themselves. Therefore, Oh reader! take courage; we will only inflict you with a short sketch of what we are. What we have done, you can easily find out by turning over any page, or by glancing down any column, of either of Tulane's periodicals.

We came to Tulane a green Freshman class, as green and innocent as a Freshman class should be. We knew nothing and thought we knew it all. We soon found out, however, that some professors knew more than we did. Our ignorance gracefully submitted to their superior knowledge, and they, as a reward of our meekness, dubbed us "Lameducks," "Hoodlums," "Young Gentlemen," etc., and bestowed other opprobrious names upon poor, bewildered, blundering us.

But what's in a name? The Lameducks waddled through the green sedge of Freshmanhood and boldly paddled out upon the deep, dark pool of Sophomority; and the other calumniating epithets met a deserved death at the hands of their own injustice.

As Juniors, we were neither too good nor too bad. We flunked gracefully in physics, but graciously condescended to make it up; we carried on, with wonderful vigor, the Franco-Prussian war (which historians erroneously believe to be over), and we won the interclass foot-ball championship.

As Seniors, we learned many things, and this one thing above all others: To know and recognize the strength of that attachment for one another which four college years, with their community of hopes and fears, joys and sorrows, victories and defeats, have bred and matured in us. And latterly, just when the full strength of the tie that bound us together was beginning to be felt in the new pride of our Seniority, death slid into our midst with ruthless suddenness and left our lives less by one living friendship, our hearts sore and saddened. Strong, true and loyal heart; bright, sunny smile; unselfish, generous soul; you have left us who needed you, but you have left us better for having known and loved you.

The heart has gone out of my task. Saddened by a memory that will ever pain, your historian lays aside the pen—the sketch unfinished. But what need of more to you who know?

Junior Class of 1901.

Class History of 1901.

“Thus far our fortune keeps an upward course.”

—Shaks.-Henry VIII.

FROM the abode of the immortals there falls upon our ears discordant sounds of wailing. Thucidides is bemoaning his fate because he can not live on this earth again to become more famous by writing the history of the glorious class of 1901. Caesar, Alexander the Great, Napoleon, and all the renowned generals of antiquity are angrily seeking an opening in the heavens from whence they may come down and partake of the glory that would accrue to them in being on the side of 1901 in the great contests of college life. Far away up in the clouds, we can plainly see old Socrates riding in his basket, trying to let down to the earth by means of a long string, some wholesome advice as to the art of philosophising; his string has just now reached us; how disappointed poor Soc looks; his advice has been cast aside, for the philosophers of 1901 can acknowledge no superior.

So it is with us in all branches of college routine.

The spirits of the great poets, philosophers and mathematicians who have passed into history, and even the greatest orators and politicians of the present day, are trembling with fear, for they see that from the class of 1901 there shall arise such intellects as will cast their fame into oblivion. We are the pride of every professor in the college, of whom each vies with the other in singing our praises. So great is their admiration that a great many of our heroes have been offered chairs of assistant professorship in German, Biology, French, Latin and Mathematics. Several of the most capable men of 1901 have even been urged by the Board of Administrators to take upon themselves the Presidency of the University, but owing to their extreme modesty and reverence for age, they have refused, although the board has offered to raise the salary of the president to $30,000 a year for them.

From the time we first entered this great University, we have been engaged in a tremendous war, which can terminate in no other manner than a signal victory for us. This war has been waged not so much against the other classmen as against ourselves. Yes, we have been trying to conquer ourselves, our physical, mental and, above all, our moral defects; that is what we have undertaken and that is what we are determined to accomplish. How often have we been tempted to cut classes and to ride through college on ponies; and how often have we been tempted to give up the study of biology for that of osteology. The first two temptations have assumed alarming forms, but, as yet, few of us have yielded to them. This is how we account for so many mental prodigies. As to the last temptation, it is safe to say that there is no more fear of our having any more dealings with osteology; our worthy professor of biology has made us sick, once and for all, of bones.

In athletic circles we have always held our own admirably. Our deeds of daring have been set up as examples for other classes to emulate. We have won every contest on the campus in which we have ever entered—those that we lost excepted. In the inter-class football and baseball games, the men of the class of 1901 made the star plays, and in the spring games we have always won our laurels.

The faculty has seen fit to give us comfortable quarters, the first "Junior Study" since the flood that destroyed all such habitations; this room holds the same position in Tulane as Athens held in Greece in the age of Pericles—the centre of refinement and civilization. Gathered together in this abode, the metropolis of Tulane, may be seen a throng of cheerful idlers, such men as generally make nations and college classes famous. The walls of our abode are ornamented by the sayings of the wise men of Tulane, and not long since, one could have seen portrait paintings of three or four of the most popular professors. Such grace and symmetry Vandyek himself could not surpass. Alas! these priceless paintings have been destroyed.

The class of 1901 is not without college spirit. We have always recognized its value in the building up of a University, and to the end that our great and noble Alma Mater may become an important factor among the institutions of learning throughout the world, the class of 1901 has given with zeal and a devotion that has always been characteristic of them, their entire support in every enterprise Tulane has yet undertaken.

May our future be as bright and prosperous as has been our past.

Class History of 1902.

MORE more, the class of 1902 is brought into prominence, and is made famous by its valorous deeds! Probably, for the first time in the history of Tulane University, has any one class been victorious in two successive class rushes!

The details of the Class rush of December, 1898, need not be reviewed, and it is useless to go into the many details of that of October 6. But it is interesting to note, that the Class of 1903, like that of 1902, tried to assert and maintain their rights, or rather to maintain what they supposed to be their rights, but, unlike that noble class, they failed. The Sophomores are not narrow-minded enough to say that the failure of the Freshman Class was dishonorable, for it was not; it was a noble failure. The former admit that the latter behaved gallantly, and fought bravely. But tell me, dear reader, what class could ever hope to cope with such a powerful and renowned class as that of 1902? Why, the reputation, only, of the class, would be enough to make any Freshman tremble!

Let us now give a little evidence, to prove that the importance attached to those two victories, gained by 1902, is not exaggerated: If any one were to visit the Tulane Museum, in the most prominent case, the first objects that would meet the eyes of the visitor would be the two canes won in open conflict by the students whose colors are the crimson and the white.

On the gridiron, also, they made a reputation for themselves. They defeated every class team that was put against them, and they would no doubt have defeated the Seniors had the latter had the courage to come on the campus and get a dose of "24 to 0 in favor of the Sophomores."

Since the dignified Seniors would not come to "show the Sophomores how to play football," is it not only right that the latter claim the championship? Surely. So good were the Sophomores at football that every game played by the 'Varsity would find at least four Sophs on the team.

It is true that the 'Varsity did not win a single game, but there were some star plays and players, and if it were asked who made those star plays and who were the star players, the question would be very easily answered by the single word—Sophomores.

The Class of 1902 is not only a class of warriors, athletes, and football players, but also a class of renowned literary geniuses.

In the annual literary contest of the Glendy Burke Literary Society, the winner of the medal for oratory was a member of 1902. The professors admitted that the oration was one of the finest ever heard at a Glendy Burke annual exercise.

The Sophs are well represented on the Olive and Blue, and on the Collegian. Moreover, the president of the Greek Circle, the editor-in-chief of the Olive and Blue, the prime ministers of the G. B. L. S., the secretary, the treasurer, and a member of the Games Committee of the T. A. A.—all these are members of 1902.

But, "stop!" we hear the gentle reader cry; "Give me time to ponder over and digest these startling facts, these glorious deeds, before overwhelming me with other details of a career so wonderful." We can not be deaf to the appeal, for we recognize, as all forsooth must recognize, that such a record as that of 1902, if laid bare in all its perfection, and brilliancy, must unhinge the brain of the deepest thinker. So, reader, meditate o'er the little you have heard, and, perchance, you may be able, from this faltering and imperfect presentation of a few facts, to form an idea, not adequate nor sufficient indeed, but get a dim conception of the glories of 1902.

Freshman Class of 1903.

Class History of '03.

WHEN 1903 began her career in the halls of Tulane, there assembled a heterogeneous crowd, composed of nearly every description of awkward youth. In their hearts, however, there was a determination to conquer, and with this end in view this motley body congregated on their arrival at their future alma mater, to prepare to perform its noble task.

According to time-honored custom, the Sophomores volunteered advice to, and attempted to rule tyrannically over, this newly organized tribe. A grand rush, finally, was the outcome of these gross insults. On that far-famed battlefield, where all disputes of arms are settled, the rivals met. Outclassed in numbers and in animal strength, the gallant knights of 1903 lost a victory, but were by no means defeated. Bearing in mind the situations and success of Washington, Fabius and William of Orange, and keeping before them such examples, the Freshmen were not discouraged, but rallying with remarkable alacrity, the class again took up its journey toward the coveted goal.

Among other minor affairs between the Sophomores and the Freshmen, was the victory of 1902 in the inter-class game in football, Nothing daunted, however, 1903 prepared herself for an undertaking to determine whether Tulane should close the season of '99, without one representative on the gridiron scoring. The fates had decided that such should not be the case. On one December morning, in a sharp contest with the High School, Tulane's Freshmen were victorious.

Great was the rejoicing throughout college, and an awe among upper classes hitherto unknown developed for this heroic band. Nevertheless, there was sadness in the hearts of upper classmen, to think that such a responsibility had to be left to their younger brothers. The Seniors, in consequence, even went so far as to drape themselves in mourning, and to conceal their chagrin gave a name to their gloomy garbs.

In other branches, also, the greatness of 1903, individually and collectively, made itself apparent. Among the first of her achievements, may be placed her winning the Glendy-Burke medal for elocution.

Of the great men of the class there are poets, orators, and philosophers that swell her number. These, together with the excellent material already produced, will some day allow Tulane to proudly point to 1903 as a model class, and one to be remembered in her history.

Senior Class, 1900.

Class History of 1900.

BEFORE we make our final bow, and retire gracefully from the stage, we will respond once more to this last curtain-call and try to express our thanks for your appreciation and applause, which we hope has not been altogether undeserved.

Dear friends all, Newcomb sisters and Tulane brothers, be lenient, we pray. It is the last time; very soon we will no longer be a part of the familiar scenes of college life. The background will remain the same—the winding walks, the old live-oaks, the quiet, dim, chapel, the fountain with its broad lily leaves, the echoing arcade, the sunny class-rooms with clustering associations—all these that we have learned to know and to love so well; but in the shifting panorama of succeeding classes, other forms in flowing black will crowd the Senior study-room, other voices than ours will discourse learnedly on the Pre-Subconsciousness of Infinite Space Category.

But deeds live longer than words: and we hope that, in these later days, some trace of the class of 1900 will have remained in the atmosphere of Newcomb—"footprints on the sands of time" to guide our younger sisters along the path, through all the usages that beset undergraduates, up to the final goal of glorious graduation.

We have always tried to act as if the reputation of the college hung solely on our deeds; nor was this undue vanity, but simply an appreciation of our responsibilities, which, since we have become dignified Seniors, have so increased as to be rather burdensome at times. "However," to quote a learned contemporary, "never for a moment do we forget that we are Seniors; indeed, we gloat over the fact, and flaunt our vestments of rank with pardonable pride in the eyes of less fortunate students."

And if we have ever taken a stand, established a precedent, or calmly ignored one, it has been because of our resolve to support this dignity of cap and gown in spite of all criticism.

Looking back upon our college course we are glad to feel that it has been so smooth. There are some mile-stones along the road which are hung with laurels, and which stand out very clearly in our memory.

But there would be no use in recalling details, which are no doubt as familiar to you as they are to us, for the four acts of our little drama have been played before the eyes of all the world.

The three unities have been very well preserved; nearly every one of us has been present from the very first ringing up of the curtain on the grand introductory chorus; and where could be found a class more thoroughly unified and uniform than 1900?

At first, it is true, we were many and various; scarcely a type of college girl but was represented in our class.

We had the "dig," who "dug" her eyes out—nearly—who always hunted up her English references, never failed to answer her question in Greek history, and always remembered to bring her pencil to dictée Française and to put her blotter in her German exercises.

Then there was the butterfly—the exact opposite of the aforementioned damsel; this fair maiden attended Carnival balls and Tulane Germans with religious regularity, but there this charming virtue ceased; she was always seen the next morning drowsily languid, with the morning dew not yet shaken off her gauzy wings—after the fashion of butterflies. Prominent among our ranks, also, was the cutter—one person too often described for me to describe her;

this is the sadly degenerated individual who ignored alike the soul-refining pleasures of art, the delights of the gymnasium, the charms of long-continued lectures and the frantic summons of the avenging goddess in upper regions for the stolen privilege of perching on one corner of the study-room table and hearing the latest news.

But now all these distinctive types have softened, merged and blended into one—the Senior, in cap and gown, with the sole aim and ambition, common to her class, of doing her very best, and of pushing onward toward the long desired reward.

And soon, dear friends all, even this type will, for us, be changed to that of the sober and “grown-up” Alumna. The finale is growing near, the curtain will be rung down on the last tablean, and we shall step over the footlights to join the spectators below.

Class History of 1901.

UPON the dizzy heights of enduring fame will I plant the standard of 1901. Alone upon a topmost peak it will tower aloft, a brilliant inspiration to Newcomb and her daughters, as long as time pursues his restless flight, nay even as long as Freshmen are green and Seniors complacent, as long as the JAMBALAYA affords to ambitious historians the opportunity of class praise.

All this I planned, but in ignorance. For when I came to praise our class for its intelligence (of which it surely has its share) I found all the necessary superlatives exhausted. Every class in the JAMBALAYA has been "most intelligent," and since we would not use "intelligentest," it is useless to say anything of the mental capacity of 1901.

Having decided to extol our record in gymnastics, I thought with joy of the victory at "Newcomb," when as Freshmen, we vanquished completely the haughty Sophs. But, remembering that our skill in "cutting gym" is now notorious, I considered it wise to say nothing of athletics.

1901 might be celebrated for the beauty and charm of its members, but classes, who possess those qualities only in imagination, have long ago laid claim to "most beautiful" and "most charming," and 1901 will be content with nothing less.

Of what, then, shall we boast? At the risk of being called unfashionable, we are not going to boast at all, but tell you our real opinion of ourselves. The truth is we are not really remarkable at all; quite as fine as the other classes, to be sure, but not, perhaps, very much finer. In finding out this fact we consider that as Juniors we have made rapid strides in our education.

When we were Freshmen we dreamed that our deeds would one day eclipse the record of all other classes, and, in the enthusiasm of youth, felt confident that our memory at Newcomb would never fade.

As Sophomores we believed that we had already reached the heights of fame and glory, and, crowned with the success of our class night, we sang from the heart,

" Do you know the great class of the College ?
Nineteen one, nineteen one.
Surpassing in wisdom and knowledge,
Everyone, everyone."

And again,

" When we leave
You will surely grieve,
For there're no others
Like nineteen one."

Now, as Juniors we know that after the caps and gowns of one brief year, after the dignity of being Seniors for a little, the sceptre will fall from our unwilling hands, and we will be forgot—like every other class.

In the three years of its existence, nineteen-one has learned the value of philosophy. Such mottoes as: "It will be the same in a hundred years," and "An excuse from ' gym ' is worth the attempt," are the constant solace of its many ills.

Such terrors as summons by Maggie to the library, as quizzes and examinations with attendant conditions, terrors which caused us as Freshmen to quake with fear, are now faced without flinching, and conquered by the sheer force of our philosophy.

From a class as interesting as ours, of course you would like to hear more. And you shall next year when we are Seniors, and tell you for the last time,

" There're no others like nineteen-one."

Class History of 1902.

CLASS history ! What an enormous task, especially when the class for which you must write the history is the famous and original one of 1902. In the first place, our illustrious deeds are so numerous that I fear some sceptical person will think I exaggerate if I tell all of them, so perhaps it is better to relate only the most notable events.

During our Freshman year we proved our right to occupy the place which we hold by fash, our studious behavior and by carrying out to its fullest extent our motto—"Excelled by None." We are proud to say that in our Freshman year, we gave the first Freshman class play that had been given for two years; that we showed an interest in our splendid brother class at Tulane, in both their cane rush and their class football games, and that we encouraged them in preparing their magnificent Class Day; and that we actually stirred up that bright (?) and hard-working (?) class of 1901 into giving a Class Day! Are those not achievements of which to be proud?

On coming back to college this year we felt the dignity of our position as Sophomores, and gained the respect of all the poor, little scared green "Freshies," who still think that the class of 1902 is remarkable; and who will dispte that point with them? Then we had our first meeting, and Miss Post was again unanimously elected president, and we all felt that our leader was a very competent one. At the second term meeting Miss Monroe was made our leader, and under her we have prospered splendidly. Through her exertions all our plans for Founder's Day have been already arranged, and as our table was regarded as the best last year, we are sure to keep up our reputation for the coming Founder's day. Then, too, what class ever took such an interest in singing, or preserved such order in the Library, as the class of 1902? What class began Organic Chemistry before the third term? What class astonished all the professors by their brightness? What class has the most college enthusiasm? All these questions can be answered by 1902, and it is also true to say that no class ever had so much class conceit, or so much reason for that conceit.

Then, too, we have always been a comfort to the college, for all the professors feel when we come into the room that they will have a perfect recitation and also the most splendid conduct. (Ask Miss Augustin, if you don't believe me.)

And we have also succeeded in carrying out our motto, which is too familiar for repetition, and I can prophesy that we will always maintain that high standard which it implies, and that Newcomb will always look with great pride on her glorious class of 1902!

Class History of 1903.

HERE is a temple, the building of which began with the Creation, and through all ages the wisest and best have helped to raise the structure, and the work goes on until time shall be no more.

Each generation builds its arch for support and adornment, and the names of the workers in this glorious temple have not faded from memory, nor their work decayed, nor perished—for this is the “Temple of Knowledge.”

Other temples, though built of solid stone, have, as the centuries rolled on, fallen into ruins or crumbled to decay; the name of him who planned the noble proportions, and of those who worked out its wonderful details, lie hidden amid the rubbish of Time.

This majestic temple but grows in strength and beauty with the years. High and clear-cut are carved the names of those who wrought its grand designs in metal and wood, its lace-like tracery in marble and stone, its massive columns of solid support.

Painter and sculptor, carver and goldsmith, for centuries have given their best achievements to adorn the temple. Each science and each art has contributed—history and poesy have recorded the fame of its builders, and through age succeeding age, sweet music has taken up and repeated the song of its glories.

Far and wide are trumpeted by the clarion voice of Fame the names of those inscribed upon its walls and pillars :

Chaucer	Corneille	Cicero	Galileo
Shakespeare	Racine	Virgil	Newton
Nixon	Augustin	Harkness	Spencer
Herodatus	Pythagoras	Goethe
Plato	Euclid	Schiller
Dixon	Bettison	Wespy

5907 years passed enriching the temple with the spoils of time. And now the great and wise of the present century are called to build their arch. Art and science, every cult and all culture are assembled to inaugurate the work that shall render them immortal.

To what body of workers shall so mighty a task be entrusted? What designers shall equal the mighty ones gone before? What galaxies of genius shall eclipse the brightness of the world's past achievements?

For so enduring an edifice the materials must be chosen with unerring wisdom.

The marble must be perfect through and through, lest the sculptor's chisel reveal flaw or stain. The wood of finest grain, so as not to warp. The steel well tempered. The iron hand-wrought.

In long and earnest council meet and debate the world's renowned artists and artisans.

The choice is made. To the "forever-to-be-honored" band of workers the glorious task is assigned.

Four years of labor unparalleled! labor and research in every branch of Literature, Art and Science!

Cunningly traced devices tell the marvelous achievements of this band—superb carvings repeat the history of its labors.

Through richly stained and tinted glass, flooded by morning sunlight, or illumined by the rays of setting sun, the beauties of the painter's art are made visible, showing the beatific vision of the glorious masters of this illustrious company.

Halo—crowned, appear in majestic beauty, Gilleano, Monrolsini, Smithanus, Nixoni, Ramondi.

At length the arch stands complete—the world pauses to rejoice at the amazing beauty, the miraculous blending of wisdom and skill. A decree goes forth—it is the decision of the people. Henceforth, forever closed shall be the Temple of Knowledge.

Never could future generations add beauty or excellence—never more of knowledge or wisdom or grace—all that is possible is embodied in this magical arch—the Temple must be considered finished and its doors closed!

On the columns upholding the roof of the Temple are ordered to be inscribed the names of the “immortals”—the builders.

By reference to the engraving at the head of this article you will have no difficulty in deciphering their names. It only remains to add that they were known to the world under the name of “Class of Newcomb, 1903.”

Alas! for those who come after them, for

The Class of 1903 of Newcomb College
Has eaten the last leaf of the Tree of Knowledge.

Newcomb Art Department.

Newcomb Art School.

The Newcomb Art School was organized in 1887 as a department of the H. Sophie Newcomb Memorial College.

By means of a generous donation from Mrs. Josephine Louise Newcomb, the founder of the College, the beautiful and completely adapted Art Building was erected in 1895 to accommodate the growing classes. This building is perfectly lighted and ventilated, and is provided with separate studies for each study; galleries for the exhibition of drawings and paintings; an Art Library of carefully selected works, and other appliances necessary or useful to the successful study of Art.

The Art School has recently made an important extension of its work by the introduction of pottery manufacture.

The course of instruction includes drawing, color and design. Their application involves underglaze painting.

In its wish to further the application of art teaching, to practice and to advance the status of artistic handicraft, the school assists the students to maintain sale agencies, to conduct exhibitions and in every way to promote their interests.

“Knowledge is bought only with a weary care,
And wisdom means a world of pain.”

CARRIE BATTLE.

“Thy modesty's a candle to thy merit.”

JOSEPHINE BURKE.

“No nobler feeling than this of admiration for one higher than himself, dwells in the breast of man.”

MRS. O. W. CHAMBERLAIN.

“I have heard of your paintings, too, well enough.”

ALESTHIA CLEMENS.

“The shallow murmur, but the deep are dumb.”

SARAH S. COLE.

“She is a woman, therefore to be won.”

IDA COHN.

“Woman at best a contradiction still.”

ELIZABETH DAVEY.

“Man wants but little, but that little long.”

BELLA FUCICH.

“If she will do't, she will: and there's an end on't.”

DONA GRIFFIN.

“Enough, with over measure.”

LILY GUEDRY.

“If to her share some female errors fall,
Look on her face and you'll forget them all.”

LIELA GREEN.

“I am a fool, I know it; and yet, God help me. I'm poor enough to be a wit.”

LALLY HENDERSON.

“Mistress of herself, though China falls.”

HATTIE JOOR.

“For men may come, and men may go, but I go on forever.”

Member of Art Students Club.

ERSKINE HOCK.

“It would talk: Lord! how it talked.”

IRENE B. KEEP.

“A beggar that is dumb, you know.”

Member of Art Students Club.

LEILA ELLIOTT.

“A flattering painter who made her care
To draw men as they ought to be,
Not as they are.”

ELIZABETH C. LE BOURGEOIS.

“O, swiftness never ceasing.”

Member Art Students Club.

College Editor Olive and Blue, Collegian and JAMBALAYA.

GRACE LEWIS.

“She's pretty to walk with,
And witty to talk with.”

CICELIA LEONARD.

“An angel, or if not, an earthly paragon.”

LILLIAN LOEBER.

“You'll draw a faultless monster,
Which the world ne'er saw.”

JENNIE MAY LAND.

“Men delight me not; no, nor woman neither.”

KATHERINE LANGTRY.

“To hold, as't were, the mirror up to nature.”

MRS. EMMETT M'GAUGHY.

“I shall arrive, what time—ask not.”

MRS. W. W. MILLER.

“It's safer to be meek than fierce.”

ALICE MCGLOIN.

“Who has not paused while beauty’s pensive eye
Asked from his heart the homage of a sigh.”

RUBY L. PICKENS.

“A chapter of accidents.”

MRS. T. T. ROSS.

“The noblest kind the best contentment has.”

HELEN RICHARDSON.

“What, my Lady Disdain, are you yet living.”

ALICE RAYMOND SCUDDER.

“I’ll charm the air to give a sound
While you perform your antic round.”

Member Art Students Club.

ERIN E. SHERRARD.

“There is great ability in knowing how to conceal one’s ability.”

MISS LANDICH.

“Little star, how I wonder what you are.”

MARY B. VAUGHT.

“A sweet, attractive kind of grace.

THEO VANCE.

“A rosebud set with little wilful thorns.”

PAULINE WISE.

“Knowledge comes, but wisdom lingers.”

MARY WILKINSON.

“I have no other than a woman’s reason.”

ROSALIE URQUHART.

“Last but not least.”

This is the part of the book consecrated to children of Themis ;
Here are inscribed the names of the Governors, Judges and Lawyers,
Who, in the years to come, will bring glory and gold to the Southland.
Look through these rolls with care, so that one day, with Pride to your children,
You may be able to say, of some newly created Chief-Justice :
“He was a Schoolmate of mine,” and in all our spare
Time, before lectures,
We used to play “Crack-a-loo ” and indulge in the
Matching of nickels.
He was a crack first-base, but he often fell down in
His quizzes.
One day he got in a fight, where his eye was unmercifully
Blackened
By a man who was long his clerk, but was recently made a
Recorder.
That was a glorious class ; and many a bird and a bottle
Met, at our hands, with fate, and was made into brains
For the nation.
Men of all grades were there, the brainy, the brainless, the Headstrong.
Adams, to politics born, and Beauregard, loved of the ladies ;
Boylan and Boyce and Broussard, and Cordill, a big man from
The country ;
Claiborne, so hungry and long, the scion of stock celebrated ;
Danziger keen as a die, and Gates who laughed, loafed, and was Lusty ;
“Plug,” a once famous “Guard” and Grant, with his “stiff
Talks” and verses.

Hunter used midnight oil, but Glennon and Cooper were lazy ;
 Ivy, renowned "Nigger Ned," and Honorable Joe
Lautenschlaeger,
 Kicking whene'er he could, till we fastened his foot
To the Foto.
 Famous for yarns and jokes, were Morrison neat, and Maguire ;
 Jake was a mimic skilled, but Maguire with marvels could match
Him.
 Simplest of all to guy was Jim Parkerson, known as "The Farmer ;"
 Miller, Bob Perry and Love, and Spiller, who spoke not, but Studied.
 Terry, the terrible talker, the warrior, ward politician.
 Thilborger, father of all, who made a big hit as a chairman.
 Thoens was a baseball crank, who made Duffy and Denechand
Wretched.
 They used to sit near the front and yawn in the faces of 'Fessors ;
 We used to sleep back behind, and laugh at the jokes which
We heard not.
 Ah ! those were glorious times, when life was all sunshine
And flirting.
 Little we knew of the law, much less did we care for the morrow ;
 Money was scarce and despised ; from the first to the Fifth we had plenty.
 Drove and Champagned till the sixth ; then walked and lived
Off of meal tickets.
 Three shirts we had, and no gloves, but youth, which possesses
The Future,
 Coupled with grit and ambition, to which every honor lies open,
 Fired with visions of Fame, Reputation, and Glory tremendous.
 Hard-worked, perhaps, but filled with wonderful dreams of
What might be ;
 The Come but a means to an end, we impatiently waited the Coming.

Confident, sure of success, unconscious that aught was

Beyond us;

Come! Oh come back to me, Youth! Take back, Father Time, your Distinctions.

Off with the Ermine and Black! Away Senatorial toga!

Avaunt second thought and ye years; let us back to the Hall and the fellows.

NOTE.—If a doubt exists in the mind of any one as to the competency of the present board of editors, we invite you to examine carefully the austere countenances which decorate the opposite page.

The heavy absence of “ Parson ” Matthews is indeed deplorable, and we ask the indulgence of his friends. The power behind the throne, “ Newcomb,” is not visible to the “ unclathed ” eye, but even to the casual reader of this volume its influence will be apparent.

A Brief Retrospect.

AFTER a mighty struggle, when fate seemed to have doomed for the Collegian a most disastrous career for 1899-1900, and when our contemporaries and rivals felt a certain exhilaration in having "snowed us under," we "bubbled up serenely" to their utter dismay and dispelled all their plans for the jollification over our supposed disappearance from college journalism. Not only was the Collegian to overcome all obstacles which stood in its path, but it was to return to a monthly form after an absence of two years. It is needless to extol our success of the past year; that has already been accomplished by connoisseurs of literary talent, and essays on leading authors, published in this magazine, have been studied by the college students as part of their course, so masterful and brilliant has been the genius of the critics. But lest I may appear too egotistical to some narrow-minded Freshman or half-civilized Sophomore, let these seek advice from some older heads and try to appreciate gems which may prove too deep for their unsophisticated comprehension. Nevertheless that the veracity of my statements might be questioned, turn back a page and verify my remarks by a glance at the group which stands as the representative of the past year's labors, and then, after gratifying your curiosity, silently wonder how it all happened (?).

The reins of control have passed to younger heads; and in retiring from the arduous burdens which the Board of 1900 have borne with so much college spirit! Let us cheer for the Editor-in-Chief who wrote a "Romance," though never in love; shout for the Business Manager who ran the Board, Magazine and even the printer; applaud the Secretary, who so conscientiously loafed on his "rep.;" and admire the rest of the Board who so willingly gave their names to patronize the magazine, while laboriously searching for the genius of their minds in ancient family records. So here's to the Collegian Board of 1900, and like:

"Lives of great men all remind us."
We have made our lives sublime—
(Running the Collegian.)
And departing, we shall leave behind us—
(Collegians on the desks of the Professors, Immortal Emblems of brilliant careers.)

NEVER is the task of the historian a light one, even though the subject of his chronicles be but the puny exploits and insignificant deeds of a class, a society, or the faculty. Most arduous, however, are the duties of him who would attempt to compile a compendium, however brief, of facts relating to that famous and history-making journal, the Olive and Blue. Many and huge are the tomes to be consulted, intricate the statistics to be presented, stupendous the figures and facts to be marshalled, in dealing with such a subject. You, gentle reader, would be awed, were we to lay bare to you at once, and without adequate warning, all the inner workings of that august body of overworked editors, commonly termed the staff. We must needs, therefore, be satisfied with a brief retrospective glance over the career of the paper during the year 1899-1900, the hey-day of its youth as it were, when a genius controlled the paper, another genius managed it, and numerous assistant geniuses labored to give an expectant and highly appreciative public all the news that was fit to print.

When we look back over the year that's past, we are struck by the memory of those happy minutes spent at Newcomb, when the Board was wont to assemble in monthly session and study over the political situation and the probability of there being a holiday the next week; those were the days when jokes, awful in their grandeur and sublime in their gravity, were fruitful and did multiply; when the Newcomb editors did dutifully laugh at all worthless puns, and the penalty for not applauding every remark emanating from the superior masculine intellects was fixed at dismissal from the foree. We remember especially the day when Paul, the ever-generous and open-hearted, told, with tears in his eyes, of the day he had bestowed upon the printer a Christmas present in the shape of a waste-paper basket. How beautifully did he describe the thanks of the recipient of his bounty and how he impressed his hearers with his sincerity and good-heartedness! 'Tis such incidents as these, so affecting and yet so pleasing, that make us long to conjure up in our fancy those happy gatherings of yore.

We remember the dignified Editor-in-Chief, he who did preside at those meetings with such grace, whose editorials were the pride of the college and will be found engraved in letters of living light on the heart of every Tulane man in death ; who made such a visible impression on all the editors of the fairer sex ; who advised the faculty and dictated to the administrators. Sure, he was a noble picture of a man! There rises up before our mental vision, too, the Managing Editor, he with the massive brow and the head like a turnip, who directed the editors and bossed them around ; who never made a report at a meeting but that he said, "I have nothing to report except that none of the editors have been doing their duty ;" and who assisted the Editor-in-Chief in running the University and using the free theatre tickets. And finally we recall the third great figure of that glorious and mighty triumvirate, the Business Manager, that strange combination of a Yankee and a Dutchman, who ruled the Board with a rod of iron and whose lightest word was law. He it was on whose head the much reviled and oft abused printer called down blessings, asserting with much feeling that "he was the nicest man she ever knew." But words are powerless to describe this prodigy. To know him you must know him.

Fain would we recall and dwell with fond affection on the name and memory of each member of the staff, all of them well worthy of our attention ; but time and space forbid. 'Tis just as well, however. For never could we hope to give the reader an adequate idea of the men behind the Olive and Blue in 1900. Let him who reads this pause and cogitate upon the importance of the facts which we have so briefly outlined, and though the idea he may form of the greatness of the paper and those who edited it be ever so dim and so far below the truth, yet would further statements on our part be useless. For the tale of their glories can never be all told.

Art Students Club.

ABOUT a year ago a band of nine Art Students met in the Life Studio, and formed a circle for the study of modern art. The first meetings were thoroughly informal, no officers being chosen, and the work in hand was planned after general discussion.

Modern decorators were first chosen for consideration. Magazine articles, bearing upon the subject, were read, and reproductions of the works of Chavannes, Abbey, Sargent and Vedder were furnished by the several members.

At the beginning of the year's session, the class became more formal in its nature, rising to the dignity of a club. Officers were elected, Miss Emily Huger being made president, Mrs. Douglass Anderson vice president, and Miss Olive Dodd secretary.

The meetings of the Art Students Club, are held every two weeks.

With Professor Woodward's kind assistance, the following program was arranged: .

Sculptors, Painters, Portrait Painters, Illustrators.

Professor Ayres has generously donated a folio in which are to be kept the literary efforts of the Club.

Its members number nineteen.

PROF. THOMAS CARTER HONORARY MEMBER.

The Greek Circle of Tulane University.

A University must ever take pride in any movement which tends to elevate and broaden the sphere of intellectual culture and advancement. Among all the resources which might be employed to this end, none can claim a more honorable position than a close investigation and study of topics connected with the classic literature of ancient Greece.

The widening and strengthening influence of such investigation and study, with difficulty indeed to be overestimated, calls for no further discussion at this juncture. In recognition thereof, however, it is but natural that Tulane should find especial satisfaction in the organization of a Greek Circle. A few words concerning the history of its development can scarcely prove uninteresting.

Early in February, of this year, the idea of forming such an association was conceived by the classical students of the class of nineteen hundred and two, and in response to their call a meeting of all classical students was held. It was decided to elect a temporary chairman, and Mr. Ralph J. Schwarz was chosen to fill that office. A committee on constitution and by-laws was appointed, and upon the report of this committee, at the next meeting, held February the twelfth, the classical students went into permanent organization under the name of The Greek Circle of Tulane University.

The constitution and by-laws submitted by the above-named committee were adopted, and election of officers held thereunder. Mr. Ralph J. Schwarz was chosen president of the Circle, Mr. Watts K. Leverich, vice president, and Mr C. P. Tomkies, secretary.

The organization is new and has its history before it. Its past, however, short as it is, justifies the brightest hopes for the future. Its members have undertaken their purpose with calmness and deliberation, and it is with this same spirit that they prosecute their work. The dash and impetus of the enthusiast has been laid aside for the thoughtfulness and conservatism of the wise. Ἔργα Καὶ Σοφία are the pass words of the association, and all those who come impressed with the good of work and the power of wisdom, will find ample room within the limits of the Greek Circle.

It is hardly to be thought that an organization sustained by such noble aspiration, and lofty aims can fail to have a potent and lasting effect upon the subsequent history and development of Tulane University.

In the words of Thucydides, we rest our hopes, and we too trust that τῆς δυνάμεως ἐς ἀπίστων τοῖς ἔπιγεγορημένοις μνημη Καταλείψεται.

Chide not my faith, e'en tho' to thee it seem
The golden fancy of a petted child,
Who makes ideals and keeps them undefiled
Within the promise of his happy dream.
Thou mayst have cause such thoughts to lightly deem ;
Yet, were Life's hopes on Time's dim scroll compiled,
Thou wouldst behold how few at Faith have smiled,
How many held and hold it past supreme.

So staid am I in my unwav'ring trust
In life and love of a Futurity,
That—were the mount of God proposed to me,
Toilless to gain, did I but forfeit hope—
Deceived, I'd rather grovel in the dust,
And trusting, die, ere I had reached the slope.

The Apple of Discord.

A loitering lad o'er a farmer's fence
Did an apple once behold,
His longing grew, for he little knew
'Twas the Apple of Discord old.

He climbed up clumsily, rail by rail,
From the high, top-rail he slid
Into briars thick, 'twas a scurvy trick
Which the Apple of Discord did.

Stones and sticks to skyward went,
'Till at last that apple flew;
The boy with a vim, put the apple in him.
'Twas the Apple of Discord two.

Without the fence the farmer lay,
"Now will you be good," said he;
With a hickory stick he laid it on thick,
'Twas the Apple of Discord; see?

In tears and fear he homeward crept,
With his limbs all black and blue;
For he'd torn his pants on those briary plants;
What more could the apple do?

The mother ran to wrap and rub,
And spoke in a soothing strain,
But when by chance, she looked at his pants,
There was discord once again.

The slipper rose and the slipper fell;
He panted; his pants were thin.
Then he went to bed on water and bread,
With Discord's Apple within.

In houts twain he rose again,
And began to pace the floor.
What else can rack the front of your back,
Like a hard green apple's core?

The mother mild to the rescue ran
With an army of bottles tried.
From a physic fight in the middle of the mite
That Apple of Discord died.

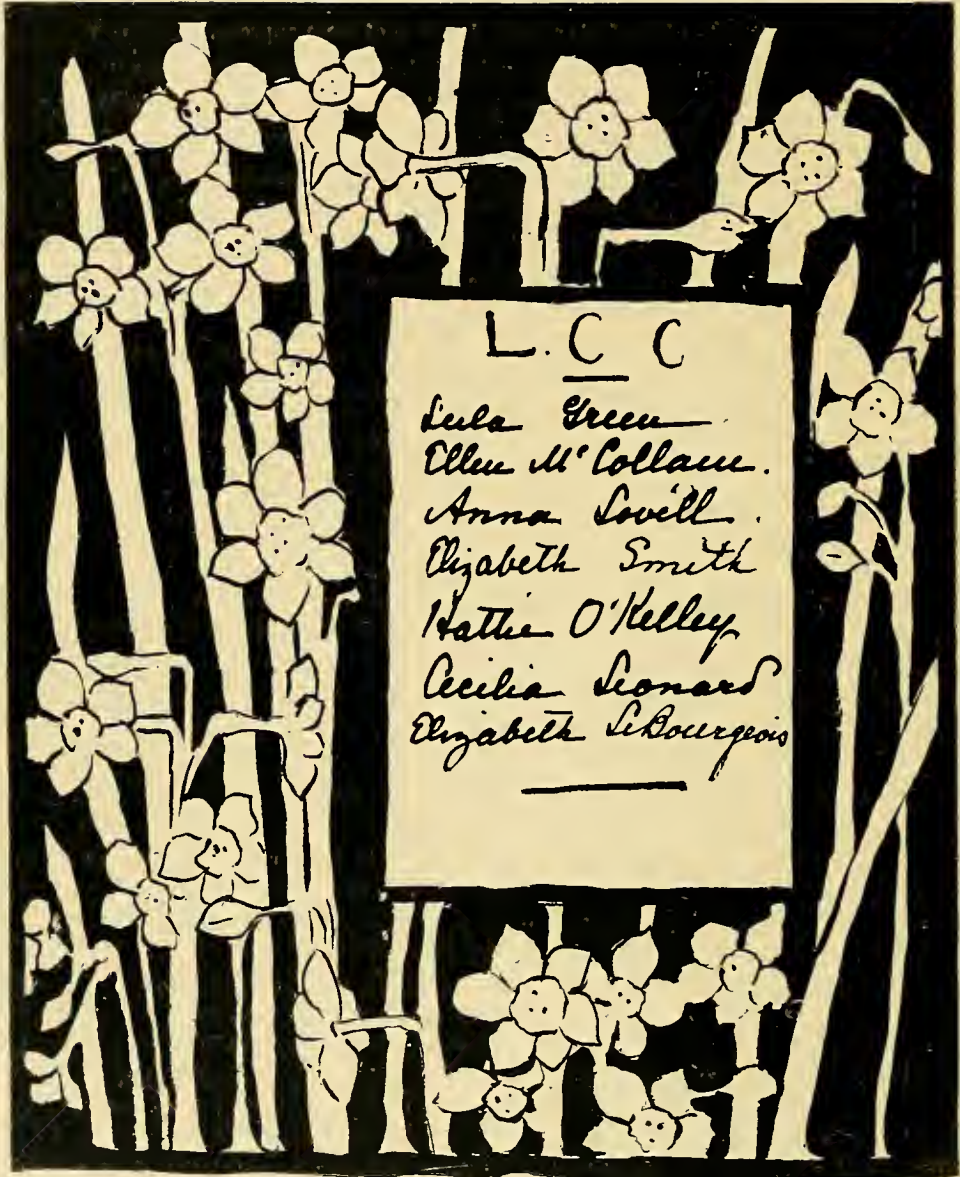

When he thought of the stickin', the pantin', and the lickin',
That youngster solemnly swore,
That, no matter whose treat, he never would eat
Of the Apple of Discord more.

The Moon is Beautiful.

“The moon is beautiful,” she said,
As back upon my shoulders sank her lovely head ;
And two deep, windy sighs from two fond hearts
Rushed into one when lips met lips,
And down the moonbeam from the moon there starts
A mystic mist, which wraps our hearts
In dewy gladness, and condensing drips
Upon our souls still dwelling on our lips.

“The moon is beautiful,” I said,
As to my leaping heart I crushed her lovely head,
And two quick, burning breaths from two hot hearts
Rushed into one, when lips met lips,
And down the moonbeam from the moon there starts
A lava-tide which sears our hearts,
And flames and flakes, and whips
About our souls still dwelling on our lips.

I thank you, sir, I's poly,
I's got er mis'ry in my back,
An' jes' declar to gracious
De thing am bout ter crack.
I used up all de linnymet
Dey had up at de sto',
An' wants to ax you, doctor,
Fer jes er little mo'.

I's got er innerd fever
Right here erbove my ches',
An' er gripin' kinder feelin'
All round erbout my breas'.
My stomach's out ob order,
It keeps me up all night,
An' I's done formed de 'chision
Dat ebery thing ain't right.

Jes' one thing mo' now, doctor,
An' dat's erbout my head,
Hit hurts me mos' perticlar
Arter I goes to bed.
My jints gits stiff and hurts me,
So I skase kin move er roun';
I guess do dat's from plowin'
In dis wet Lu's'anna groun'.

De thing dat's mos' perticlar
I cum to see you 'bout,
My wife she's got ter thinkin
I's troubled wid de gout.
An' sence I set ter thinkin
'Bout medicines and pills,
Can't you gin me somethin
Fur ter break up dese here chills?

An' while you be er mixin
Dem medicines fer me,
My baby's jest es wormy
Es enny thing can be;
Den she's troubled wid der ague
Bout ebery day er two,
So try your han' now, doctor,
An' see what you kin do.

My 'oman too's been ailin',
She's got er sickly spell,
Can't you help me, please sir,
Ter get dat 'oman well?
I hates ter keep er botherin
Er man dat is so kin',
But sickness is er bother
Fer me, an' yourn, an' mine.

What's my bill now, doctor?
(I guess I's got er nough)
What you say? Eh dollar
Fur jes dat little stuff?
But dat's on time, I reckun
I oughtenter kick at all!
I'll pay dis bill sho, doctor,

How Tommy Spent Last Sunday.

DEAR MAMMA :

LIKE a good little boy, I went to Church Sunday. I didn't want to go, but Aunt Sally told me there wasn't room in the pew for me, so I went. I don't know why she said so, but when I got there, I found only two in the pew—Aunt Sal and a rusty-looking guy with wild eyes and whiskers that needed ironing out. Aunty nearly threw a fit when she saw me come in, and was awfully nervous during the whole service—I guess she was ashamed of the skate with her, even though she seemed to have a graft in that direction, for I wanted to sit between them, but she wouldn't let me, but made me stay in the other end of the pew all by myself.

The sermon began. The bishop was in the box. He preached about the punishment that was bound to come to all sinners. Everybody in church looked uncomfortable. The men wanted to get up and leave, and the women just rubbered around—I suppose to get tips for their new hats and dresses.

The old gospel-shooter must have had the wind side of the congregation, for the church was filled clean up to the bleachers. It took me some time to catch on to his curves, and when I did, I couldn't couple up with them.

The first thing he said was that there was hope for us all. The crowd seemed to brace up at this and looked easy. But right afterwards, he knocked a homer off their pet theory of hell on earth. It looked pretty blue for us. But as he fanned out the next time when he went up against the reward of all sinners, we took heart again. You know, mamma, what an awfully bad boy Harvey Jones is, and he never even got a licking, except the one I gave him. He couldn't feaze me there. I had him dead to rights, and I wanted to jump up and tell him so, but Aunt Sal put her paw over my mouth and made me take in a reef.

After that I went to sleep, and didn't come to until I felt something hit my chin, and I found a holy-looking old chump standing over me with a plate in his hand. At first I didn't know what he wanted, as they use a hat at home, but Aunty soaked me one in the slats with her umbrella, and I tumbled to it. But as I didn't like the old sky pilot's sermon, I passed. His whiskers opened up for the limit. Aunt Sal sure has that old hog tight by the ears.

It seems so funny, but the boys here do just as they do at home. Most half the Willies in town must have been outside the church waiting for the girls. Some of the girls looked disappointed, but Aunt Sal knew she was solid and towed her rusticus through the crowd like a center rush.

I tried to make up for badness by walking home with them, but that didn't grease matters any. Both of them tried to shake me and threw all kinds of gaffs at me. But his nibs is used to walking on thin ice.

Aunty was as mad as an angel with his wings clipped when we got home and wanted to put me to bed. I kicked. Then she said she wouldn't give me any ice cream for dinner. But I worked the cook and got some anyhow. Now, mamma, don't you think Aunt Sal was mean to me?

TOMMY.

LOOK!

YE GREEN FRESHMEN

AND BE WISE.

We, the august and dignified Sophomore Class of Tulane, on account of the increasing number of frolicsome and troublesome Freshmen, deem it necessary to create a few rules and regulations for their special guidance and benefit:

1. That every Freshman upon meeting a Grave and August Sophomore shall immediately doff his hat, keeping it in the air until he has passed three feet in the rear of his superior.

2. That all Freshmen are positively prohibited from carrying canes under penalty.

3. That all Freshmen are forbidden to wear anything in the shape of headgear but a crush hat.

Therefore be it resolved that any Freshman caught breaking the above rules will be severely punished.

(The disregarding of rule 2 {two} a couple of years ago led to a cane rush in which seven Freshmen were killed outright and many more wounded.

Freshmen take warning.

The Reason Why.

There was a fool and he held a pair,
Even as you and I;
He had picked up his hand in blank despair;
There were four red hearts and two queens there;
His chest felt clammy, he breathed a prayer,
Even as you and I.

His reds were scarce, and his whites were few,
Even as you and I;
He was sorely tried as to what to do,
For the flush is fine, but its chances few;
With a sigh three cards on the board he threw,
Even as you and I.

At his queens, he glanced, then one by one,
Even as you and I,
He raised his draw, ere the game begun;
Two tens, two hearts! What have I done?
Oh! oh! for the flush that I might have won,
Even as you and I.

But, on second thoughts, he was not so sad,
Even as you and I.
For tens and queens are not so bad;
But he kicked himself; he was swearing mad,
On account of the flush that he might have had,
Even as you and I.

He raised her five, and they all came in,
Even as you and I,
Then he hiked her five, for his stacks were thin;
There might be a loss, but he had to win,
And to miss such a chance were a deadly sin,
Even as you and I.

He hiked and hiked, to his hindmost crown,
Even as you and I,
He had meant that gold for his wife's new gown,
He sipped his julep that thought to drown;
Being called, two pairs on the board laid down,
Even as you and I.

A fool there was, and he held two pair,
Even as you and I,
But they never could beat three nine spots rare;
He grasped at the gold, then he saw them there—!
And that's how he happened all cards to forswear;
Even as you and I.

Impressional.

This the breezes sing, Love,
That pass me by;
In new-born notes of spring, Love,
This burthen sigh:
"When O! when?"

II.

The stars at night, Love,
Move to song;
The echoes, slight, Love,
Thin waves but long:
"When O! when?"

III.

Defer a hope, Love,
Hearts grow sick,
Moon and mope, Love,
Beat less quick—
"When O! when?"

IV.

Says your sigh, Love,
Low but deep;
Speaks your eye, Love—
Tearless weep—
"When O! when?"

V.

Locked together, Love,
Loving we—
Wind and weather, Love,
Nothing be.
"When O! when?"

VI.

Closely held, Love,
Anvil beat
Could not weld, Love—
Closer heat.
"When O! when?"

VII.

Two hearts ring, Love,
Ours they;
Two souls sing, Love,
Will, some day:
"When O! when?"

VIII.

Sometimes mad, Love,
Living heat;
Sometimes sad, Love,
Soft and sweet—
"When O! when?"

IX.

Love is wide, Love,
As the deep;
Time and tide, Love,
Bring but sleep.
"When O! when?"

New Books.

TWICE TOLD TALES—New and revised edition of Hawthorne's famous classic. By B. V. B. Dixon; 12 Mo.; $1.50.

Accompanying this volume, is a scientific treatise by the editor upon the use and abuse of ancient tales, as an adjunct to psychological lectures, and on the best methods of telling a tale twice without impairing its effectiveness. Specially recommended to professors of psychology and philosophy.

POLITICAL ECONOMY FOR SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES—By J. R. Ficklen; 16 Mo.; $3.

Synopsis, Production—Chap. I.: Production of Noise in the Class-room; cause and remedy. Chap. II.: Original Documents; when necessary to produce. Chap. III.: How to Produce an Impression, with a Prosy Lecture upon a Sleepy and Inattentive Class.

Consumption—Chap. I.: Time, its value and method of consuming to best advantage; Chap. II.: How to Consume Lunch and Lecture at the Same Time.

DISORGANIC CHEMISTRY—By J. W. Caldwell; 12 Mo.; $3.

Follows the old and tried lines, but contains the following subjects never before treated upon: Disorganized and Demoralized Classes; The Use of Smelling Salts in the Laboratory; Method of Making Non-Odoriferous Hydrogen Sulphide; Shot Throwing; Failures.

THE BETTING SYSTEM, OR THE LAWS OF CHANCE SET ASIDE. By James H. Dillard..

If you would be convinced, send for prospectus. The author's vast experience eminently fits him for the preparation of this work. Complete instructions how to win at all games and contests. Particular attention is given to the chapter on craps shooting on the campus, and on athletic contests. Owing to the prominence of the author, and the exceptional merit of this work, we have to charge $5 per copy. Special rates to clubs. Discounts to students.

AYRES ON ELECTRICITY, OR HOW TO STEP UPON A LIVE WIRE WITHOUT BEING HURT. 8 Mo.; $2.50.

This is a simplified edition of the author's well-known work, especially adapted for Freshmen.

RUGAN'S RHYMES—A collection of verses by H. F. Rugan, containing the famous poem, "True up dem Sides," with numerous others, written in the author's famous buzz-saw meter. 16 Mo.; $1.

THE MANAGEMENT OF DEBATES IN THE CLASS-ROOM—By J. H. Deiler. For Teachers and Professors; Paper; 50 cts.

GEORGE W. CABLE AS I KNEW HIM—By Alcée Fortier.

The author, from his long and intimate friendship with the famous writer of Southern Idylls, is peculiarly qualified for this work. The book is timely and interesting, giving a masterly and appreciative criticism of Cable's writings, with a special chapter on the excellence of his Creole dialect. $1.50.

These books are among the very latest received by the popular firm,

Once.

ONCE there was a college man
Who didn't smoke or drink,
ONCE there was a Newcomb girl
That studied (I don't think),
ONCE there was a Sophomore
Who didn't know it all.
ONCE there was a Freshman
Who was quiet in the hall.
ONCE there was a 'Fessor
Who didn't tell old jokes.
ONCE there was a good report,
You bet, it reached the folks.
ONCE there was a lesson
That everybody learned.
ONCE there was a slot machine
Divided what it earned.
ONCE there was a boarding house
That fed the students well.
ONCE we were in heaven
But now we are in h—l.
