

Don't Get Caught Without These New Books

A Confederacy of Dunces

A Novel by John Kennedy Toole Foreword by Walker Percy

"John Toole's novel, A Confederacy of Dunces, is, I can say without hesitation, a fantastic novel, a major achievement, a huge comic-satiric-tragic one-of-a-kind rendering of life in New Orleans."—Walker Percy 338 pages $12.95

Treading Water

A Novel by Robert Strobos

"A work of high skill."—George Garrett
From his Dutch boyhood and the occupation of Holland during World War II to the contemporary power struggles among the staff of the hospital he serves, Tobias Nord combats isolation while he searches for personal calm. 176 pages $9.95

The Discovery of America and Other Tales of Terror and Self-Exploration

Stories by Alvin Greenberg

Although influences of Barth, Borges, Barthelme, and Kafka are woven into these ten contemporary stories they are—almost magically—the imaginative creations of a writer hailed by James R. Frakes as "one of the most exciting American fiction writers I've encountered in decades." 160 pages $9.95

The Dream of Self-Destruction

Wagner's Ring and the Modern World

L. J. Rather

Unifying Wagner's social and aesthetic theories, Rather's impressively broad study shows that in The Ring of the Nibelung, the great composer presented his understanding of the cause of the crisis of the industrialist-capitalist age. 256 pages $17.50

Dorothea Lange and the Documentary Tradition

Karin Becker Ohrn

"An exemplary work of its kind."—Willard Van Dyke
Examining Dorothea Lange's photographs and life, Karin Ohrn adroitly guides the reader to share in Lange's conviction that her photography was uniquely suited "not to show how great we are, but to show what it is like." 250 pages, photographs $27.50
