

It was opened in 1903, located at Burgundy and Touro streets, with a meat stand, produce and ^{sea food stand} and a milk stand. It was closed in 1946. It was indeed an

Your letter addressed to Walter Percy, distinguished American writer, was received with a great deal of interest. As the mother (I was born and reared) of the brilliant creator of Confederacy of Dunces, and your allusion to the Launfischschlager Market, mentioned in the novel, ~~sharp~~ memories flooded stirred in my mind. I was born and reared on Elysian Fields Avenue, and the market was at Burgundy and Touro streets. I often accompanied my older sister, on her shopping jaunts, and the large building held stands of produce, meat, and seafood.

My son The market was closed before my son's time, but I gave him word pictures of the outstanding food place in the community which he enjoyed, and kept upon ^{as material} contracting in his mind for his future profession as a writer.

Upon contacting New Orleans Main Library, I was given the following information:

City

1946

1903

Elvira Lautenschlaeger, Lister Lautenschlaeger's was was a classmate of mine at Enplanade High School, and I vividly remember her refined good looks, friendly ways, and athletic prowess, because the school had very proficient athletic directors, and Elvira was outstanding.

I am monarch of all I survey;
My right there is none to dispute;