EASTERN The Wings of Man.

“The Wings of Man” is a registered service mark of Eastern Air Lines, Inc.

At one time the area was a 500-acre rice plantation near Covington, La.

Today, contemporary buildings made of concrete, marble and glass house Tulane scientists conducting extensive studies of chimpanzees, monkeys, baboons and other animals designated as primates.

Collectively, the buildings are known as the Tulane Delta Regional Primate Research Center, one of seven such centers in the United States.

Completed in 1964, the center occupies a 500-acre tract in a pleasantly-scented pine forest. It has five concrete buildings for laboratories, cages, administrative offices, and maintenance; a secluded field for radiation studies and two outdoor observation field cages covering an acre each.

An initial grant of $2,500,000 from the National Institutes of Health covered the purchase of land and construction of buildings.

Located 35 miles from the main Tulane campus in New Orleans in an area south of Covington, the center is regarded as one of the most beautiful and extensive facilities for the study of subhuman primates. Recently, it became the newest unit of Tulane Medical Center by direction of Tulane President Herbert E. Longenecker.

Six other educational institutions are associated with Tulane in the Delta Center—Louisiana State and Loyola (New Orleans) Universities, and the Universities of Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi and Texas. Cooperation of outside research workers is a principal function of the center and one of the basic reasons for its existence.

Dr. Arthur J. Riopelle, center director, supervises research programs conducted by a staff of 25 resident scientists, assisted by 53 technicians. Officers of the World Health Organization have come several times for observation or to participate in research.

Research on about 625 primates of 23 species is done in the laboratory and in their natural habitat. Emphasis is placed in four specific areas: communicable diseases; genetics and developmental disorders; behavioral sciences; and environmental health.

The first of these, the communicable diseases program, is carried on primarily through research in four areas: parasitology, virology, microbiology and biochemistry. Principal aims are the study of bionomics, immunochemistry and parasite host-relations in selected diseases, using non-human primates as models.

Genetics and developmental research at the center emphasizes several major problems of reproductive physiology. They include fertilization, development of the embryo and the origin of birth defects. Environmental factors and influences affecting fertility and fetal growth also are studied.

The behavioral sciences program is centered on the study of social, intellectual and emotional capacities in normal primates and in primates undergoing metabolic or infectious disease states. Some animals are experimentally altered by neurosurgical, electrical or biochemical means.

In large outdoor cages and in the field, studies of social and ecological factors in behavior are conducted by center scientists.

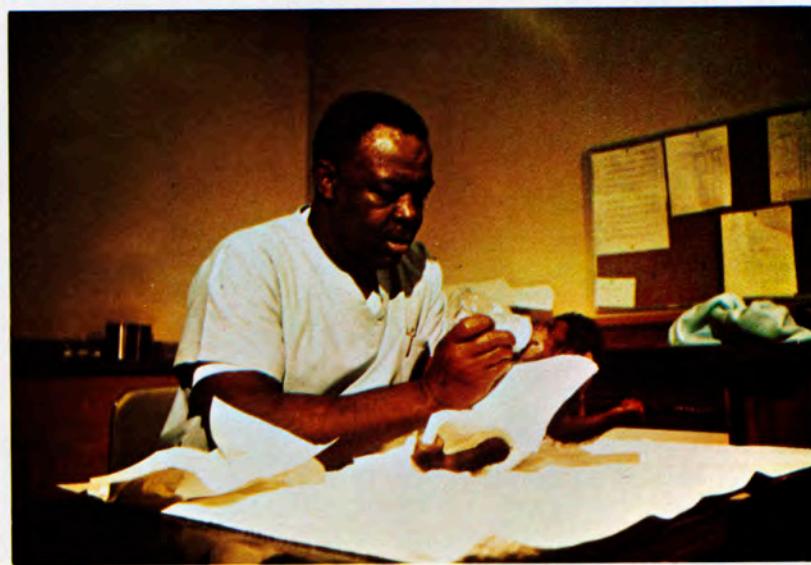

Environmental health is studied principally in relation to radiation biology; the emphasis being on investigations of radiation effects on the fetal brain and on the aging process in the central nervous system.

The studies should bring about a better understanding of mechanisms which underlie environmentally-induced birth defects in the nervous system and provide information on how human life would survive in an adverse environment, such as an area of atomic fall-out.

Tulane scientists at the center also study the effects of environmental changes on the physiological capacities of the animals and their resistance to disease.

Primary aim of research at the Tulane Delta Regional Primate Research Center is to direct the results toward eventual solution of health problems of man.

Pittman (front, center) is flanked by Frank Young (left), assistant coach in charge of defense, and Tom "Pap" Morris (right) assistant coach in charge of offense. Standing (from left to right) are Marv Kristynik, offense; Jack Orsley, recruiting director; Billy Tohill, defense; Joe Clark, offense; Gerard Boudreaux, defense; Andy Bourgeois, freshman coach.

Tulane University

In an era of rapid development of the "multiversity" campuses, crowded with tens of thousands of students, Tulane University has maintained a steady, reasoned growth without losing its sense of community.

Its eleven schools and colleges are close-knit divisions where faculty, students and staff can work together on an inter-personal basis.

And, with most units geographically near to one another, university-wide programs for all of its 8,000 students and 800 fulltime faculty provide opportunities for effecting associations among the members of all divisions.

The opportunities for exchanges of views are an important aspect of education at Tulane, as young people from all 50 states and many foreign countries share views and experiences enabling all of them to better appreciate various cultures and to develop a better understanding of the world in which we live.

Dr. Herbert E. Longenecker, Tulane's President for the last decade, is an internationally-known educator whose tireless energies are devoted to a wide range of interests.

His leadership at Tulane has resulted in significant increases in financial assistance enabling the University to increase the quality and range of its faculty and facilities and therefore, the quality of its academic programs.

Especially conspicuous examples of the results that he has attained are the construction of the new Howard-Tilton Memorial Library, expansion and development of a comprehensive medical center, provision of larger facilities for the Law School in the structure which formerly served as the university library, and the new science building which is nearing completion.

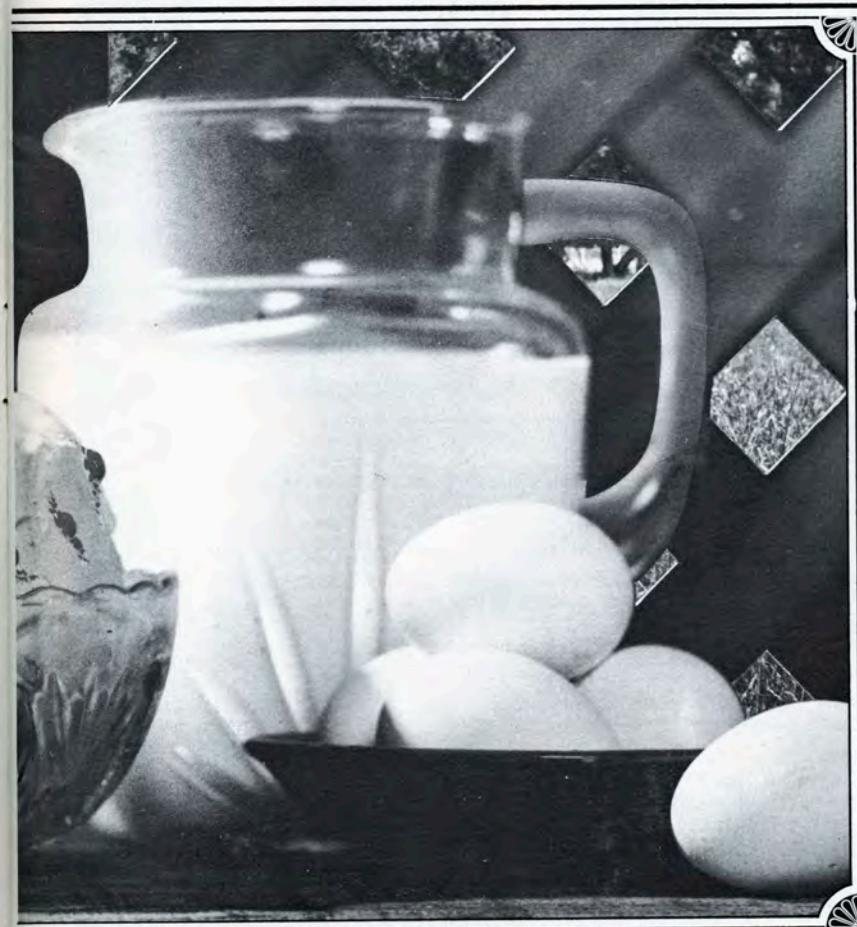

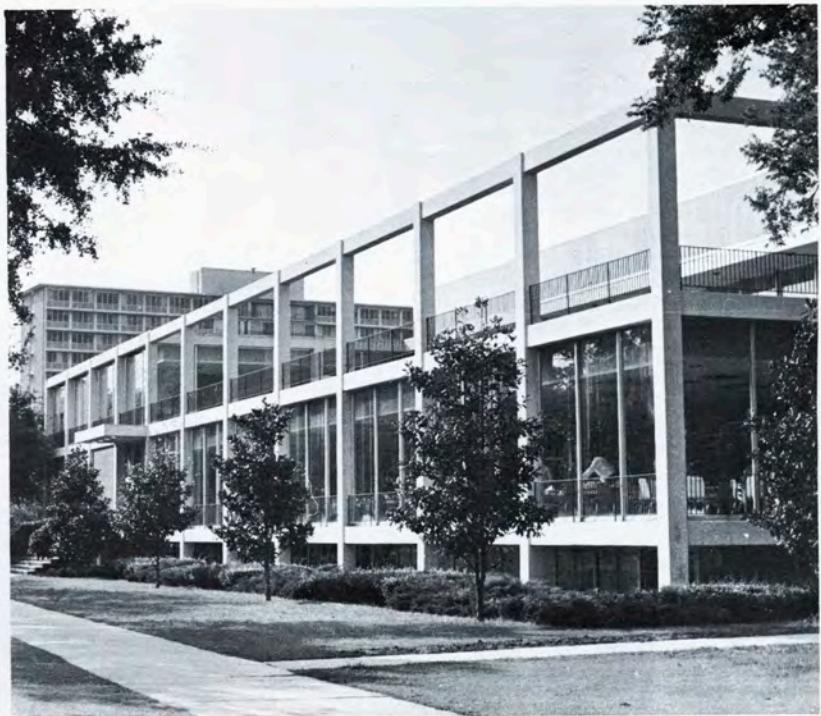

While all these things were being accomplished, Dr. Longenecker has found time to participate in national and international programs for the advancement of education, science and government and for the solution of major world problems especially in the field of nutrition.

If he has neglected anything, it has been his hobbies, though he still finds time occasionally for fishing with his friends and colleagues.

What does college football mean to you?

Seniors on the 1970 Tulane football team were all asked the same question. Here are their responses.

David Abercrombie—“Football has given me a lot—self-pride, the ability to get along with others and the chance to be a member of something. That’s the most important thing to me: the sense of belonging and working with others toward a particular goal.”

Duke Chappuis—“Through football I’ve had the opportunity to meet people, to get close to other guys on the team. Plus, I feel I have gained an insight into organization . . . the process by which many facets of our society operate.”

Billy Clingon—“You learn how to compete in football. This knowledge, I feel, gives you a background on what you’ll face in life after college. Besides, it’s good exercise and leads to health and physical fitness.”

Chip Dewitt—“From football, I have finally learned the art of mind controlling the body. The more you get your mind ready, the better your body functions. It’s amazing what you can accomplish if you try hard.”

Bryan Duck—“I’ve learned to accept authority. I’m a more disciplined individual. Being associated with a football program has made me appreciate and practice sportsmanship. The big gains and losses in football often parallel those in life.”

Mike Farnell—“Tulane has provided me with the opportunity to be among all classes of people. That has taught me how to get along with people who don’t necessarily have the same background I do. I would never have had the opportunity to learn of these different attitudes and ways of life, if not for football.”

Joe Gendron—“The game of football has given me the opportunity to receive, first, an excellent education. Also, from my experiences playing football I’ve gained the feeling that I can overcome any challenge I might face in my future life.”

Johnny Gill—“Benefits that immediately come to mind are the intangibles like lasting associations that develop with other players, and coaches. The inherent challenge in football is important, too.”

Bart Graves—“Football has done so much for me . . . like giving me an education in the best school in the South. It has allowed me to bring my family down to live in a city like New Orleans. The game has been the biggest part of my life since seventh grade. It has taught me how to pick myself up after a rough time.”

Joel Henderson—“If it weren’t for football, I wouldn’t be where I am today. It has given me a good access to an education and taught me to compete and how to compete, be it on the football field, in the classroom, or anywhere in life.”

Ray Hester—“The biggest thing for me has been the personal satisfaction I get from playing. I enjoy the hardship of football. I get satisfaction by doing my job right, and getting recognition for it.”

Rick Kingrea—“I believe that everyone is endowed with a competitive spirit. A writer may manifest this spirit in a desire to write a best seller. I have found that for myself, I can best manifest my competitive spirit on the athletic field.”

Jack Laborde—“The game of football has provided me with the opportunities for a civil engineering degree and to meet influential people in the city. You have to be disciplined many times in life; football teaches you that. Besides all that, I’ve enjoyed playing in front of all the hometown fans.”

David Richard—“Football teaches above all, discipline. Also, the competition against people equal to, or better than you, helps prepare you for the competition you’ll face later in life.”

Mike Sanford—“The spirit of competition and a diehard attitude about fighting for what you want in life are important things I’ve learned from football. You can relate the bumps and bruises you get in football to the bumps and bruises of life . . . it makes life easier to handle.”

Songs and Cheers

ALMA MATER

We praise thee for thy past, O Alma Mater!
Thy hand hath done its work full faithfully.
The incense of thy spirit hath ascended
And filled America from sea to sea.

CHORUS—

Olive Green and Blue, we love thee
Pledge we now our fealty true
Where the trees are ever greenest,
Where the skies are purest blue.
Hear us now, O Tulane, hear us
As we proudly sing to thee!
Take from us our hearts' devotion!
Thine we are, and thine shall be!

HULLABALOO

A one, a two,
A helluva hullabaloo,
A Hu-la-ba-loo Ray-Ray!
Hu-la-ba-loo Ray-Ray!
Hoo-Ray! Hoo-Ray!
Vars, vars, tee-ay!
Tee-ay! Tee-ay!
Vars, vars, tee-ay!
Tulane!

ROLL, GREEN WAVE

Here's a song for the Olive and the Blue.
Here's a cheer for the team that's tried and true.
Here's a pledge of loyalty to thee,
O, Tulane Varsity.
Here's to the Greenbacks that never will say die,
And here's to the hearts that are true
To the men of Tulane, who are fighting for her name,
For the Olive and the Blue.

Roll, Green Wave, Roll them down the field.
Hold, Green Wave, that line must never yield.
When those Greenbacks charge through the line
They're bound for victory.
Hail, Green Wave, For you we give a cheer.
Hail, Green Wave, For you we have no fear.
So ev'ry man in ev'ry play,
And then we'll win that game today.
Hurrah for old Tulane!

(Chant to be used on second chorus)

Roll, Green Wave, Roll, Roll Green Wave
Hold Wave, Hold Wave, Hold, Green Wave.
Go— go— go get the tigers
Go win, go win, go win from the tigers.
Fight, fight, fight for T. U.
T. U., T. U., the Olive and the Blue,
T — — U — — Rah, Rah, Rah, Tulane.

New Facilities for Law School

The Tulane University School of Law has been moved into new facilities at Freret Street and Newcomb Place. The building, the former Howard-Tilton Memorial Library, was renovated and furnished at a total cost of $1,040,000. It has been renamed Joseph Merrick Jones Hall in honor of the late president of the Tulane Board of Administrators and a Tulane law graduate. Dedication ceremonies are scheduled for January, 1971.

Assistant editors of the 1970-71 Tulane Law Review, Judy Tabb, New Orleans, and Sergio A. Leiseca, Jr., Bethesda, Md., discuss some points of law in one of several offices of the Law Review staff. Moot Court and the Inter-American Law Review also have offices in the building.

The renovated structure includes four classrooms with raised seating accommodating 620 students. Dr. Ferdinand F. Stone, professor of law and director of the Institute of Comparative Law, conducts a class of 200 students in the largest of the classrooms. The building also houses a court room with 100 seats and two seminar rooms seating 50 each.

This is a scene of the student lounge in the "new" law building. Harold E. Pique of New Orleans was architect for the renovation project and Gervais F. Favrot Co., Inc., New Orleans, was general contractor.

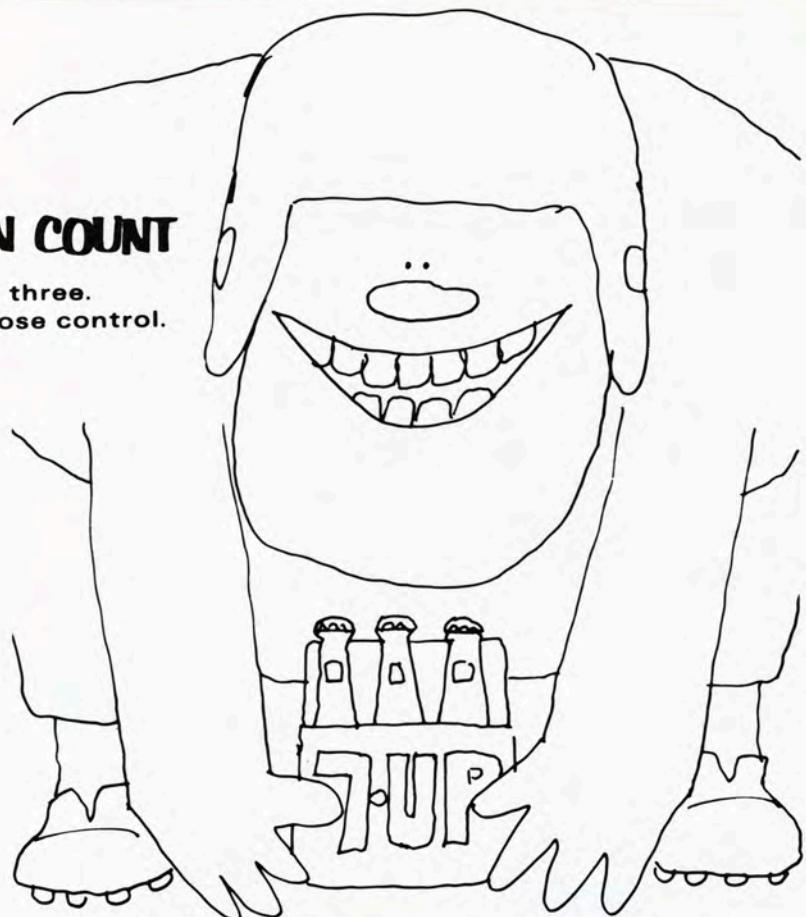

Office space is also plentiful for the law school's 30-member faculty. Dr. Leonard Oppenheim, professor of law, goes over a class schedule with St. Paul Bourgeois, second year law student from Jeanerette, La. The law school was formerly located in cramped quarters in Tilton Hall on St. Charles Avenue.

Of the building's 71,905 square feet of space, 44,695 square feet are occupied by the law library. This space includes offices for the library staff, reading and discussion rooms off the book stack area and a reference and bibliography room. Numerous small study rooms within the book stacks provide students and research workers with facilities convenient to the material they need to use.

Coach Ralph Pedersen

Tulane's basketball picture brightens considerably with All-American John Sutter returning along with a nucleus of veteran players plus some outstanding new talent from a strong Freshman team. Sutter became the highest scoring junior in Tulane history last year with 558 points for a 24.3 average. The schedule, while slightly less demanding than last year, continues to rank among the nation's toughest. But look for Ralph Pedersen's team to make a big improvement on that 5-18 showing.

Rejoice...or groan... with Wayne Sunday nights after each game!

Now—Filmed highlights of the Saints' games only a few hours after the battle. Ever since our Saints hit the field four seasons ago, Wayne Mack and WDSU-TV have led the way with in-depth team coverage.

Maybe it's because Wayne was the first sportscaster or reporter to go to a Saints' Training Camp that the players still open up to him first. He's followed them for us from the beginning. Knows what they've been through. Seen the best make it with this young club. Gained the confidence and respect of the men who wear our city's uniforms. You see it in his afternoon and evening sports strips. And now you'll see even more . . .

What Does College Football Mean to You?

Ken Sanders—"I guess the biggest thing I've learned is to take criticism. Like being in the service, when people get on your back, you take it and learn from it."

Sam Scelfo—"The sport as a whole helps those who aren't normally strong-willed individuals to become men. Athletics in general, I believe, is a good character builder. It takes courage and pride to get into top physical shape."

Butch Spencer—"It seems to me that the value of football is relative to the individual. My subjective opinion is that you can find an aspect of yourself through athletics. I've learned to look for the positive values in any endeavor that I undertake . . . Football has taught me that attitude."

Steve Stark—"Football has developed pride in me to a greater extent. Plus, I've learned how to co-operate with other people. You have to be able to do that to get ahead . . . be it in football or in life. Pride and co-operation are the keys."

J. Mike Walker—"Football has given me the chance to attend a school I dreamed about when I was in grade school. I had always thought of Tulane as a place for geniuses and rich ones, at that. Also, the sense of camaraderie I've gained is a rich reward."

Allen Wilkenfeld—"The biggest gain I have gotten from football is the ability to discipline myself. I think I now have the ability to pick myself up after a bad time without losing my poise. The competition has been a positive thing for me, too."

And with that, we bid farewell to a group of athletes who will continue to be a credit to their team and to their university in the bright years ahead.

Most cars just change. This one changes your driving.

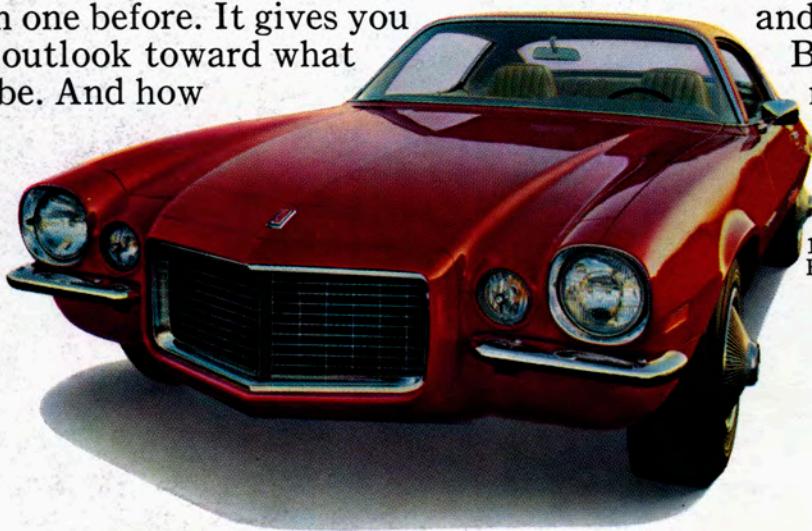

It's a Camaro.

Driving one is like nothing you've ever done before. Unless, of course, you've driven one before. It gives you a whole new outlook toward what a car should be. And how a road should feel.

For '71, we didn't change it very much. Just get behind the wheel of one and you'll see why.

But be prepared. It might change you.
