The Past.

An image lingers of those early days,
   An aftermath of tender themes aglow,
As if from distant Isles of Peace sent back—
   A vision of the youthful long ago.

This land of the yesterday spreads out,
   Blurred by the mist that clouds the eyes,
Where the rainbow garden of love is seen,
   And the daydream palace of fancy lies.

Could we to that golden time return
   And catch the fragrance of hope new born,
Would the lessons we learned in daily trial
   Be lost, as the dew at the call of morn?

'Tis best that the past, a jewel rare,
   Be hid in the sacred depths of the heart.
To be ushered forth when the stubborn will
   Is weak in strength to perform its part.

H. Z. Browne.

Dedication

In appreciation of services rendered the University during an association extending over many years, and in recognition of a lofty purpose always made evident, and scholarly attainments in literary fields, the nineteen eleven Jambalaya is fittingly dedicated to Dr. Alcee Fortier, D.Litt., head of the department of Romance Languages.

Professor Fortier.

The following sketch of Professor Fortier was written by Professor R. H. Plaisance and is taken from the "Library of Southern Literature," in which the works of Professor Fortier are represented by two selections, one in French and the other in English.

Alcée Fortier, author and educator, was born in St. James Parish, Louisiana, June 5, 1856, son of Florent Fortier and Edwige (Aime) Fortier. The Fortier family is an old one and has a distinguished record in the annals of Louisiana. In this country it dates back to the beginning of the eighteenth century, and we find one of Professor Fortier's ancestors among the signers of the petition of the colonists who protested against the transfer of the colony to Spain. The son of this signer, Michel Fortier, was a member of the first City Council of New Orleans, and earlier served in Galvez's army during the latter's campaigns against the British from 1779 to 1781. Professor Fortier's father, Florent Fortier, like a great number of the aristocratic young Louisianians of his time, received his education in France. On his return to America he engaged in sugar-planting, not losing, however, the literary tastes cultivated in Europe, for he was the author of a number of graceful poems in French. Professor Fortier's mother, a niece of Governor Roman, was the daughter of Valcour Aime, one of the richest sugar planters of Louisiana, and noted for his philanthropy, among his many benefactions being the gift to the Marist Fathers of Jefferson College, at Convent, Louisiana. From this too brief outline it may be seen that Professor Fortier is descended from the best blood in Louisiana, a fact which goes far to explain the charm of his old-world courtliness, so pleasingly blended with his twentieth century simple and democratic manner.

Professor Fortier, having completed the course in one of the best schools in New Orleans, entered the University of Virginia, but was prevented by serious illness from being graduated at that institution. About this time, his father having lost his large fortune, he was forced to earn his living, and for some time worked in a banking house, continuing his studies, however, under private instruction. Later he taught French in the Boys' High School of New Orleans, and next was a teacher and then principal of the preparatory department of the University of Louisiana. In 1880 he became professor of French in the University of Louisiana, and was re-elected when that institution became the Tulane University of Louisiana. This position he still holds, notwithstanding flattering invitations from other universities in the United States. "Professor Fortier's whole career has been characterized by an untiring energy and devotion to the work he has in hand," says one of his confreres. "He has unswervingly labored to encourage and promote the cultivation and study of the French language and literature in his State. His purpose and his achievement have been the improvement of methods and the elevation of the standard in the study of French to that of true scholarship, and we find him active in every enterprise leading to that end. His own scholarship is at the same time broad and thorough, including research in English, Spanish, Italian, German, and the classical languages and literature." His studies in Romance philology have been extensive, and he has practically opened a new field for linguistic study through his researches in the Acadian and other dialects of French in Louisiana. His accurate and successful work along this line has earned him a national reputation, and has made his name well known to every European philologist. The French Government has recognized his labors by decorating him as "Officier de l'Instruction Publique," and as "Chevalier de la Légion d'Honneur." Professor Fortier has delivered courses of lectures both in French and English before Tulane University, Southern Art Union, l'Athénée Louisianais, the Monteagle Assembly, Catholic Summer School, Harvard University, Yale, Columbia, Johns Hopkins, University of Virginia, University of Cincinnati, and University of Tennessee, and has taught and lectured in summer sessions of the University of Tennessee, University of Wisconsin, University of California, University of Kansas, University of Colorado, and the University of Chicago.

Professor Fortier is a prominent member of l'Athénée Louisianais; the Louisiana Historical Society; the Public School Alliance; the American Dialect Society; the Modern Language Association of America, which he has served as president; American Folk-Lore Society; and honorary president of the Federation de l'Alliance Française aux Etats-Unis et au Canada. From 1888 to 1896 he was a member of the State Board of Education, and his interest in the public schools has never abated. One of the most commendable facts about Professor Fortier is that notwithstanding the multitudinous calls on his time, he is ready in any town in Louisiana, however small and unimportant, to make an address to the teachers, the pupils, or the patrons of the schools.

Professor Fortier writes both in French and English, probably writing the former with more ease, assuredly with more eloquence, than the latter. His contributions to literature have been numerous and varied. He is an indefatigable contributor to philological and historical publications. He received the degree of Doctor of Letters from Washington and Lee University and from Laval University at Quebec.

The Spanish Student in the North.

Far in the South fair Hispanola
   Lies—my fond-loved native land—
Where the chestnut’s shade falls over
   A pillared manse by Ebro’s strand.

Ah, I wonder in the Northland,
   Gazing wildly o’er the main,
On the winds, my songs I forth send,
   Bear them with my love to Spain!

Roses, there, are golden glowing;
   Orange blossoms, starlike, gleam;
Soft, the fragrant breezes blowing;
   Fair is Luna’s silver beam.

At the harvest home today, I’ve
   Played my fairest melodies,
Round me dancing, mirth and gay life—
   O’er my cheeks so pale, flow tears.

Ah, I can no longer bear it—
   On, back to my native land!
Dig my grave, plant olives near it.
   Let me sleep by Ebro’s strand!

Senior Class History.

Friends and Fellow Tulanians:

It is at once a sad and a happy time in our careers when we come to the full estate of Seniors—sad, because we must soon bid farewell to our Alma Mater, which has so well nourished us through our four years of academic life; happy, because we can go forth into the world and prove ourselves men, worthy of the training Tulane has given us.

On this, the eve of our departure, we do not wish to praise our achievements, but simply en passant, to leave with you a few pleasant reminiscences.

Passing over the juvenile period of our Freshman days which we began under difficulties, our class, though small, began early to take an active interest in college activities. In our Sophomore year we furnished two stars to the 'Varsity foot-ball team and stars to the other teams as well. In literary affairs our worth was shown by the fact that two of our men were chosen to represent the Glendy-Burke in the intersociety debate. We have since furnished men for the Forum team, and the leading officers for both societies. 1911 men are respectively President of the Cercle Français, editor-in-chief of the Tulane Weekly and editor of the Jambalaya, while two from the class have this year made the 'Varsity debating team. Finally, in athletics, we have a manager of the basket-ball team, manager of the track team, and secretary of the T. A. A.

To promote a broader college spirit we have this year inaugurated a movement which we hope will be continued—that is, the reunion of all the Seniors of all the departments.

In conclusion, we realize that the glory of our college should be the goal of our activities, and we trust that, striving as we have to spread a spirit of good will and a feeling of fellowship among our fellow-students, we have succeeded in promoting that broader college spirit that shall redound to the greater glory of Tulane.

History of the Junior Class.

The Class of 1912 has now reached the third great chapter in its history. We have reached that point in our lives at which we are content to sit back with dignity and view the now seemingly frivolous deeds of our phenomenal childhood.

Is it necessary to record here the long list of great things that 1912 has done in its three years of life at the University? Does not the mere mention of its name recall to the mind of every Tulane student a long line of marvelous achievements? However, for the benefit of a few (if such a few exist), it now becomes my duty to sketch briefly on these pages as many of our great doings as our even greater modesty will permit.

The fall of 1908 found us, a number of timid "Preps," graduates, knocking at the great portals of life. The doors were soon thrown open by the welcoming Sophomores and we were ushered in with much ceremony. The Sophs seemed to strain every muscle to maintain the high standard of hospitality, so well known in the South. But their supremacy lasted scarcely twelve hours. The pendulum swung back, sweeping all before it, and within a week it was generally admitted that 1912 was one of the greatest classes that ever came to Tulane. Not only did we conquer the Sophs, but we also turned our attention to university activities and the winning of the respect and love of our "Profs.," both of which we did with equal success. (?)

The next year found us still in the first ranks. Our members could be found near the top in all branches of college activities—athletic, literary and "grind." Subduing the Freshmen was a matter which took but little of our time. Should you speak to a 1913 man, he would doubtless point to the tank, but he would not mention the "First Day Fight," "The Wrestling Matches," "The Tug of War," "The Picture" (which they had taken twice), "The Debate," and many other things. During this year we gained even more love from our "Profs." and more success from their point of view.

In this year we need only say "look" and you may see. As Juniors we have passed out of that stage of childish fighting and have now turned our attentions to endeavors more befitting our dignity. Did I say that we have passed out of the stage of fighting? True, we have finished all childish fighting, but as long as there is anything to fight for 1912 will fight!

History of the Class of 1913.

Since the entrance of the Class of the "Unlucky Digits" many important events have transpired which would be impossible to enumerate in the allotted space.

Of the unparalleled and majestic accomplishments which have so far shaped the destiny of the class we will give only a brief outline.

Pluck and perseverance are the two most noteworthy characteristics of our class. These traits alone explain why our college life thus far has been one continuous ovation.

How upon our entrance His Excellency, the President, complimented us upon being the most handsome class that had ever entered, and how we soon won the esteem of our Professors, are only incidents. Were not the entrance requirements raised on account of our admirable ability to cope with them?

Of our athletic feats it suffices to say that we produced a foot-ball team which easily defeated the Sophomores, and a champion base-ball team. Our memorable victory on the night of the tank fight will remain as a red (and black) letter day in life's calendar of every loyal Sophomore.

Moreover, we have been models of conduct for our embryonic brethren. We have taught them not to be vain, but to realize that the Sophomore year is the most important period in their evolutionary development.

Of our scholastic attainments we modestly refrain from speaking, for they are, as Livy says, "quae ediscertando minore vero faciam." It suffices to say that we were represented last year in both inter-society contests and this year have a place on the 'varsity debating team.

Realizing that the duties and responsibilities of our college will soon fall to our lot, we are already taking a most active part in all branches of student life. While we have developed to a degree class spirit and enthusiasm, we have endeavored to suppress these petty interests with a broader University spirit.

Endeavoring as we have to give you a fair and unprejudiced outline of the history of our class, we do not wish to extol our virtues nor to laud our gains, but we recommend you to our future.

So, looking back upon our past, we hope to make it a stepping-stone for a more glorious future, and we only hope that it will be as bright as our ambition has led us to believe that it will be.

TULANE
Freshman Class History.

"The Class of 1914 matriculates at Tulane University! The old students are awe-stricken! The Faculty is astounded! The President of the United States congratulates Tulane upon the acquisition of such a Freshman class!" Such are examples of the blazing headlines which were seen in papers and periodicals all over the world on September 29th, 1910.

Yes, we are compelled to admit it; they meant us. Our career as a class has begun most auspiciously, and our fame has been spread to the remotest corners of the earth. But there are a few who have not heard of our achievements, and it is for the benefit of that uneducated and inattentive minority that we publish this history.

In the first test of strength between the Freshmen and Sophomores, on registration day, we literally mowed down our opponents, tied them with a long rope in single file, and were about to cart them away for display at Newcomb, and other localities. At this juncture the President of the University appeared and begged that we spare the trembling Sophomores.

Why consider the Freshman-Sophomore foot-ball game? Why mention the score? 'Twould but bring greater sorrow into Sophomore hearts, 'twould but bow their heads deeper with shame! Freshmen 44—Sophs. 5.

Of course it is well known that we permitted the other side to win the tug-of-war. This was because we desired to encourage them a little, so that they would at least enter into the "tank fight," and other events. Since this is a history, we should not foretell the result of the "tank fight" and other future contests. But the spiritualists and mediums of our class are in constant communication with the "great beyond," and their "controls" assure them of Freshman victory.

During the past foot-ball season, our class was well represented on the 'Varsity, these Freshmen in fact were the mainstays of the team, and with the advent our class foot-ball prospects have brightened considerably. We have, besides these gridiron heroes, noted track men, famous base-ball players and excellent basket-ballers, to say nothing of tennis champions, and other varieties of athletes. So it is easily seen that we are "it" in all sports (and are sports!) but we must prove that our intellectual ability does not fall far short of our physical prowess. On the average our class work has been excellent and very few "flunks" are heard of. Examinations should never be made the subject of jests; there is no telling what an offended exam. will do to a budding humorist. But it is inspiring to see the Freshmen juggling "logs of a thousand feet," discovering new "elements," and exploring the "wilds of Cicero" in search of the "main verb," while preparing for the examinations.

It will be said that such a versatile class should not be lacking in musicians, nor is it. The Freshmen can claim to be the prime movers in the establishing of the Mandolin, Banjo and Guitar Club, which promises to be the pride and boast of Tulane. Moreover several of the song birds of 1914 have placed their mellifluous tones at the disposal of the "Glee Club."

We have established an unprecendented record by winning all of our contests (save one).

We have displayed large quantities of that much discussed and demanded form of hysteria, "college spirit." But it is our chief pride that we have succeeded, at last, in making the term "Freshman" not synonymous with untutored and verdant youth, but synonymous with men of brain and muscle!

Beloved, let me look into your eyes!
Let me believe that truth is written there—
A page inspired, a sacred poem, where
A world of Beauty and Revelation lies.
Oh, I vouchsafe to you my manhood’s prize,
My life’s Ideal (’tis safe with you) and dare
All things for your sweet sake, since toil and care
For you grow sweet, and sorrow from thee flies.
Thou dwellest far above me as the stars—
Unreachable fore’er as poet’s fame.
Thine eyes smile on me like the stars above!
My laurels I can only wreath around thy name,
So thou canst immortal be as poet’s song.
And e’er, sweet eyes, among the stars shine on.
Newcomb Song.

Air—"Die Wacht am Rhein."

Where stars arise in Southern skies
And loyal love in laughter lies,
O Newcomb fair, we bring to thee
Our hearts' allegiance, bold and free;
We bring to thee, whoe'er shall be,
The star of our ascendancy.
Newcomb, our Alma Mater, stand we nigh!
Newcomb, thy daughters lift thy flag on high!

Where deep and slow the currents flow
Past silent fields and city glow,
We vow our loyal hearts to thee!
O Newcomb, Mother, thine are we;
From sea to sea shall never be
Thy equal in our loyalty.
Newcomb, our Alma Mater, stand we nigh!
Newcomb, thy daughters lift thy flag on high!

Where flames the fray, or fades the day,
By open trail or darkling way,
We stand thy sword and shield to be,
O Newcomb, Mother, great and free.
No dawn shall see our army flee,
No foe shall shake our trust in thee.
Newcomb, our Alma Mater, stand we nigh!
Newcomb, thy daughters lift thy flag on high!

FANNIE H. LEA, '04.
History of the Class of 1911.

"Yea," heavily sighed the Alma Mater, as she turned her tearful eyes toward Heaven, "they are gone. Tomorrow must I unfold my arms to embrace the new generations, but my heart is sore, my life a meaningless void—Alas! pity my suffering and return to me the dearest and best of my progeny, for indeed without them I cannot exist." But even as she spoke a shimmering green and white cloud floated above the horizon, and a figure within beamed down upon her. "Grieve not, beloved one," it said, "our spirit abides with thee. Have we not endowed you with permanent institutions and placed all preceding ones on a firm basis? Will not the Freshmen be welcomed at once unto your fold by the other members of your family, because 1911 set the precedent for it? Has not the worry of conflicting meetings, rehearsals, practices, all been finally settled by a fixed schedule of seasons and events? Is not the Dramatic Club an assured success now with the presentation of its play the week before the Christmas holidays, and with student ownership of the foot-lights? Will you not offer a wonderful field of recreation because of the making and maintaining, throughout the whole year, of a fine tennis court on the dormitory campus? Did not 1911 originate and promote the Student Council, justly to relieve the Faculty of much vexation and power? Did not 1911 set the first example of showing her broad university spirit by leading her younger sisters on to Gulfport, the big university trip, and by accepting the invitation of the 1911 Classes of Tulane to a 'Senior luncheon'? Who was it that petitioned for a course in Economics and placed this branch within the reach of future generations? What class ever attended so regularly and punctually Dr. Dixon's class, and at the close of it could produce such original theses?"

And ever as a gentle murmur came the echo, "Nineteen-eleven, Nineteen-eleven." "Truly our career has enriched you, so help the coming generations to follow where 1911 has led and their subsequent success may in some measure bring solace to your aching heart."

Gods of the ancient scholars,
   Of the men who seek to know,
Listen awhile to the plea of a child,
   And if we are erring—show!

We have sought in the path we followed
   To study the laws you made;
What we have done in the years agone
   Is sign of the homage paid.

Work and clear, ringing laughter,
   Unreasoning tears and wild
Anger and hate and remorse come late
   Have we known. You saw and smiled.

Through these you have led us onward,
   We halted not by the way;
The time flew fast and we've come at last
   To think of a dawning day.

In that past we learned the lesson.
   And lived one life, if you will;
Let us profit then and be wiser when
   We've this other life to fill.

Grant us the truth of our watchword
   Through the years we live to die,
Let the fame of these be with us please!
   Our prayer—and the reason why.

Class Poet, '11.
Junior Class History.

The history of 1912! Colossal undertaking! Happy is the man who has only such little tasks to perform as the treeing of the fourth dimension, the discovery of perpetual motion, or reading all the history collateral. I once asked someone in the days of my youthful naïveté "What is a colossal undertaking?" And he, though he knew me well, replied, "Something you had better not undertake." But that was before I had as an inspiration the mighty deeds of 1912. But has not history been defined as "a chronicle of mistakes"? Then how construct a history of a class that makes no mistakes? So let us look over our record and see if any can be found for material.

We began our career with a "great deed of arms"—to say nothing of hands and teeth—when we conquered 1911 and flew our banner over Newcomb. This achievement was followed by beating the Arts at basket-ball until they felt about as big as thirty cents' worth of radium. We repeated this easy victory the next year and then added 1913 to our belt of scalps. That our academic standing has been most exalted even the most illogical can infer from the fact that the Faculty—chilled by dwelling in the rarefied atmosphere of our uniformly high As—has ceased to issue our reports. Our originality and creative genius are such that Miss Smartness is unable to recognize the most familiar rule or construction when we have stamped it with our personality. She is compiling a Grammar entitled New and Startling Forms and Constructions Recently Discovered by the Junior Class. In Music our performance is always characterized by great movement and dash; for the moment we begin, everybody in hearing moves away with brilliant velocity and makes a dash with passionate con forza in the opposite direction. As for Art—while a few of our number have confined their efforts to the simple branch of drawing soulful glances from admiring youths—others have developed so subtle a technique that they have been known to draw a breath in the most natural manner. And is it too much to predict that the day may yet come when some of us may even draw a check? The class treasurer hopes not. The Freshman Class will be our witness that during this year 1912 displayed more class spirit—or spirits, rather—than Newcomb was ever blessed with before. But never, until the day before last Thanksgiving, had we made such a parade of it—I mean them.

In addition to the glories already achieved, we may say, without fear of contradiction, that the Class of 1912 will, in the near future, have won a distinction that no other class in the history of Newcomb has won in the past, or in the future may ever hope to win: for, when coming generations look over the musty annals of our Alma Mater, beside the name of no other class will it be proudly recorded, "Graduated in 1912!"

Since in all this scintillating record there is such a conspicuous absence of blunders on our part, we must content ourselves with chronicling the great mistake made by other classes of not imitating (to the best of their ability) the surpassing glories, the unique perfection of the Class of Nineteen Twelve!
Class Poem, 1912.

Three years ago we joined, as Freshmen, care-free and gay,
   The band that, seeking higher things,
   Ever aloft its members brings
To the goal so far away.

2.

There were many of us who entered, that well-remembered day,
   With a longing in the heart of each,
   To struggle, to strive, to find, to reach,
That goal so far away.

3.

But some of us left the seeking, and some of us could not stay;
   There were many duties calling,
   There were other pleasures enthralling,
And the goal was far away.

4.

But we who have kept to the seeking, we who still are here.
   We will not give up the fighting,
   For joy is our future lighting.
And the goal is very near.

5.

We look back on our trials so dreary, back o'er our triumphs dear,
   Striving all to attain our ends,
   Each to other the message sends,
That the goal is very near.

6.

And now we go forward to conquer with hearts all full of cheer,
   Never wishing to stop and rest,
   Till we have done what is our best,
For our goal is almost here.

NEWCOMB

SOPHO.

MORES
Newcomb Sophomore History.

On October 1, 1909, the Class of 1913 entered the gates of old Newcomb for the first time. Needless to say it was a triumphant entry, for did we not gain an absolute victory over the Sophomores and place our banner high above theirs? Everyone knows of this, however, so details are useless; therefore, having shown our strength and superiority in one battle, we did not think it necessary to prove to another set of girls that we were truly the strongest class Newcomb has seen yet, so we decided that the fight must be abolished.

We have demonstrated our greatness and originality in more ways than this, during the past two years; in the Dramatic Club each year our representatives have gone to Mr. Socola, have seen, and conquered, winning laurels for their class as well as for themselves; in athletic circles, who does not know that we beat the Arts, and in doing it smashed College precedent into such little pieces that it was unrecognizable in the mêlée that followed? Oh! we are a grand old class, and in another direction also we have cut out a new path. The class mascot of every other class is a baby girl, while we have the distinction of being the only class at Newcomb with a boy mascot! Three cheers for little Monsieur Henri! May he have as glorious a college career as his sisters of 1913 are having!

To turn an old proverb around, "All play and no work makes Jack a dull boy," I will say that we believe this thoroughly (as a class), and we have the courage of our convictions. In all our examinations we acquitted ourselves nobly, and only about one half of us failed in Math; but in all studies our record proclaims we are a class sure to be heard from in future years and to bring honor to our Alma Mater.

Looking back upon our exploits, and seeing how early and how much we distinguished ourselves, who will venture to predict what we will do in the next two years?
What the Faculty Say.

1.
All on a bright and sunny day,
(As once the minstrel sang his lay.)
The Faculty to view the classes,
And judge the learning of the lasses,
Were gathered in Old Newcomb's halls.

2.
They praised now this class and now that,
And full an hour in judgment sat,
Till one class claimed their attention,
'Twas plain it needed special mention.
And thus about this one they spoke.

3.
"Upon this class, as passed the days,
Bestowed we oft deserved praise."
"Indeed," said one, "they grasp with vim
All science laws abruse and dim,
And so I think they far excel."

4.
"Historic lore of days of old
They know like any tale that's told.
They're easy first at basket-ball,
And in the gym. they lead them all,"
"Thus spoke another learned judge.

5.
"But why describe what's so well known?
The class is in a class its own.
In fact, the "finest ever seen."
The best of all "Nineteen Thirteen."
This was the verdict of them all.

Newcomb Freshman Class History.

Surely, every one should know of the wonderful achievements of our class since we have entered College, but for the sake of the ignorant, the very ignorant, we shall say a few things the Sophomores would rather die than tell.

Long before we added to the college glory by becoming one of its classes, 1913 knew the fighting stuff that was in us. Thereupon they deemed it wise to abolish the usual combat. They said it was unladylike—commendable spirit! Well! Our banner floated bravely on the Arcade on Registration Day.

On that same day our sisters of 1912 entertained us delightfully. We made up our minds right then and there that they were worth being proud of.

Now to say something of our athletic ability! Undoubtedly, we are going to win all the basket-ball games we play. In passing the ball and in throwing the goal we are unexcelled. If only the hard practice of the Sophomores on the field could be seen, our superiority would be evident.

Flunk! Why, we don't know the meaning of the word. Perhaps we are more familiar with the term "condition"—but even that is doubtful.

There is one thing about us—and that is not conceit, simply justifiable self-evaluation—we are the first Freshmen who do not continually forget their locker keys at home. The janitress says that and she knows.

We have hinted at a few of our mental endowments as they appear to us, but the Faculty expresses it more forcibly—"The Freshman Class is the pride of Newcomb."

And now we are not going to say what we are going to do, but we are simply going right ahead and do it fortiter et recte!
Others who are older, wiser.
   Think us childish. True,
Perhaps, but we can show them
   What our Freshman Class can do.

Though we're young and though we're foolish,
   We are striving for the light:
That by our efficient service
   We may help uphold the right.

Now our efforts are directed
   That within us may be wrought,
From the best and purest metals,
   Noblest character and thought.

When the best of Newcomb's lessons,
   Being learned, are ours to give,
Then, in giving them to others,
   Shall we really learn to live.

A Freshman’s Soliloquy.

I’m a tender little Freshman
Of the Class 1—9—1—4,
And this life that I am living
Makes me want to yell and roar.
There’s Miss Spencer’s endless theory
And her logarithm sine
And they make me weary, weary,
And they muddle up my mind.
There’s Miss Prét’s “Parlez-vous?”
As she sits and sees you wiggle
And she looks you through and through.
Then you get red and giggle.
Miss Harkness’ concentrated stare
Makes you sit and tear your hair.
There’s Miss Stone’s unceasing chatter
As she talks of matter—matter.
And her energetic tone
Makes you sit and groan and groan.
There’s Miss Baer, who teaches gym.
And she hates for us to cut,
And she tries to make us thin
With the work she gives us, but—
I ponder o’er my troubles
Thinking, “Can I stand the siege?”
Then I think of 1914—
“Ah, well! Noblesse Oblige!”

HISTORY OF TULANE LAW SCHOOL.

The Tulane University of Louisiana is the successor of the University of Louisiana, established in 1845, in accordance with the provisions in reference to education contained in the Constitution of Louisiana. The Faculties of the University of Louisiana embraced a Law Department, which has now become the Law Department of the Tulane University of Louisiana, incorporated in 1884, endowed by the public-spirited citizen whose name it bears and whose memory it perpetuates. The Law Department, established in 1847, is now in the sixty-fourth year of its existence since its introduction as a part of the original University. It has conferred diplomas on 1292 graduates, who have held respectable positions at the bar, while many have advanced to the highest judicial seats.

Up to the session of 1907-8 the Law course consisted of two years of study. But experience has shown that adequate training to begin the practice of law cannot be acquired in less than three years. The success of the student who has received less instruction is retarded and made more uncertain by incomplete preparation. This training should be procured by the student at his own expense rather than at the cost of his earlier clients. That the training can be more surely obtained in the law school than elsewhere is no longer a debatable question, as the increased attendance upon the largely increased number of law schools demonstrates.

In accordance with a resolution of the Board of Administrators, the course of studies in the Law School was extended over three full years.

Realizing the need throughout the South for a law school that would offer the highest type of legal education, the curriculum has now been enlarged so as to provide a full three-years' course for students who expect to practice in other States than Louisiana. The complete Common Law curriculum was offered for the first time during the session 1909-1910. While this important step was taken to satisfy a want most keenly felt in the Southern States, the courses offered are equally adapted to prepare students for practice in any state of the Union.
"The Law."

(With Apologies to E. A. P.)

Hear the lectures on the Code,
Civil Code!
What a mass of muddled thought
The name it doth forbode!
How the brow doth wrinkle, wrinkle,
Through the inky hours of night,
'Till you feel like Rip Van Winkle,
At the notes that oversprinkle
All the pages void of light.
Oh the time, time, time.
While your youth is in its prime,
O'er the wild concatenation
Of the precepts of the Code,
You must spend.
Of the Code, Code, Code, Code;
Code, Code, Code;
Oe'r the jangled jurisprudence of the Code.

See the schedule of Exams,
Law Exams!
What a world of weary toil,
For the man who always cries!
Through the wild, wan wastes of night,
How much incandescent light
O'er the unpolluted pages
Must be burned!
For every rule that floats
From the dust that bites our throats,
Is unlearned.
And the reasons, ah! the reasons,
They that change as do the seasons,
And in changing, changing, changing,
Like the winds round Neptune's home,
Find a glory in so rolling
From each saffron-tinted tone,
Would transform each man and woman,
Would transmute each brute and human,
Into fools.
And the student's spirit moans
As he bones, bones, bones,
Bones through aeons, ere he fails;
And his merry bosom quails,
Through the aeons he travailes,
And he falters and he pales.
As he grinds, grinds, grinds.
O'er the Law.
And he pines, pines, pines.
As he grinds, grinds, grinds.
O'er the labyrinthine Law;
O'er the Law. Law, Law,
O'er the vague lethean Law—
The Law. Law, Law, Law,
Law, Law, Law.
O'er the mad, unmelting mysteries of the Law.

He's meek, he's kind, he's feminine,
He's a Freshman—Mr. Northrup;

He's a Sophomore—Charlie Burdick;
He's bold, he's sure, he captains the crew,
He's a Senior—Dudley O'Dell McGovney.

The Law Joke.

Lawyers as a rule are serious men,
In jokes they seldom indulge;
At Tulane, just now a huge one proceeds,
It's no secret, so we'll divulge.

Our Dean, a wondrous man is he,
Our Code he knows from A to Z;
The Seniors are as busy as can be,
Learning Obligations.

Our Secretary, too, is a wondrous man;
We've got to learn it if we can.
So it's up to him to take a hand:
He's teaching Obligations—at Civil Law.

A Victim.

Metz's Greeting.

Once upon a morning dreary—as I beat it tired and weary—
Late to College bent, as I had often done before,
'Twas to Dr. Metz's lecture, and I could but scarce conjecture
What a greeting was to meet me when I opened up the door.
And my heart was palpitating as I stood there hesitating.
Even this, if nothing more.

With the perspiration oozing—all my nerve I fast was losing,
So I grappled with the door-knob as I oft had done before;
With a soft and dainty, muffled, very unassuming shuffle,
I pursued my way unruffled to a seat which hung quite near.
"Ah!" I thought, "he has not seen me," as I let my note-book screen me
From his gaze so fierce and stern.

Now there came a sudden stopping in the Doctor's speech, so shocking,
And a silence seemed to gather as I'd never heard before;
"Chappie!" roared the Doctor, fuming, "you came in so unassuming.
Innocence you've oft pretended as you 'blow in' class so late,
Where were you this morning early? I will bet with some fair girlie,
Swilling booze, if nothing more."

And he surely had me spotted—from what source he may have got it.
Is a problem that's too deep for any mutt like me to solve;
And I swear that I shall never, whether bad or fair the weather
Act so "asinine an ass" as I had this sultry morn.
For I realize quite fully, tho' the time I had was bully.
It is balanced by the hour when the Doctor had my Goat.

History of the Senior Medical Class.

In order to arrive at a stage of development worthy of the name, we must be willing to undergo that slow and tedious metamorphosis so essential to the formation of this perfect whole. It is not always by leaps and bounds that great and good ends are reached. We must be willing to see the seamy side and go down under the surf to get at the true heart of it all. It may seem incompatible with reason to apply such a status to our subject. But we hope that the kind reader may not judge too harshly this exuberance of a mind which may be somewhat biased.

We look back on four years of a checkered experience—a time filled alike with sunshine and shadow. The way is strewn with the forms of many who fell in those darker days. Valiantly they fought, and well. But who can win a losing fight? We mourn their loss, but we are cheered by the thought that perhaps some good farmer was saved before it was too late. Volunteers from other parts entered the ranks, however; and with these timely additions the fight has continued.

Freshmen? Yes, we do heed that time; and yet how passing sweet it is to note that others fill this place, but now. Sweet revenge! But, stay the mark. These tender buds like not the chilly blast. We must with kindness nurture those who stand, as once did we, upon the threshold of this unknown mystery that grows yet deeper as we move along. The mills did grind on slowly.

The second stage was reached. Wise Sophomores bloomed forth in varied hue. How full of great things to be done was all that time; when we did think to put a Mayo, a Murphy or a Matas in the shade. Tread lightly, gentle reader, on this part; for we are reconciled now to be just what we may. And, yet, the mills did grind some more.

'Tis strange to see the wonders which occur in such short space of time. The “third degree” came on, and found us wondering more and more. As Juniors we did toil and strive along in a subdued and earnest way. The mills did grind exceeding finer then, as shown by “remnants” scattered at that time. Yes, the mills did grind and grind.

At last this point is reached, and we are told that soon the end must be. The final test will tell the tale. To each other, however, we extend the sincere wish that these Medical Mills will grind us thru, and leave us high and dry with the tag of an M. D. to take home.

Medical Sophomore History.

Nearly two years it has been since a crowd of Freshmen, seventy-six strong, entered Tulane University domain. Most of them with the purpose of spending four years of useful work, and perhaps a few with not so set a purpose. After these two years the latter and some of the former by some misfortune or other have not been able to accompany the rest of the class in their steady and determined progress in preparing for their life work, so that now the Class of '13 is a husky set of Sophomores, nearly ready to enter the ship as Juniors. Its number had dwindled down to seventy-two.

As we look back to the time when we were Freshmen, we remember those days which afforded us much pleasure, despite the fact that we were considered underlings. How few of us, though, did at that time consider them as days of pleasure! Yes, if an individual but knew how to adapt himself to all situations, he can find amusements and pleasure even in the ridiculous and despised position of a Freshman.

As the years go by, our characters are rounded out more and more and we take on a sterner view of life. As Sophomore Medicals we have, nearly all of us, buckled down to our studies with the set purpose of getting out of them all there is to be gotten.

In athletics our class is well represented, having two men on the squad. The class has always been at the front in backing up the teams, in cheering the boys on to greater efforts and victory.

Now, as it is only a few months before we part for another season of recreation, let us remember our University and all strive to return in due time to take up the work as Juniors, and put forth our very best efforts for the advancement of old Tulane and the Class of 1913.

THE INTRODUCTION

MEDICAL FRESHMEN
The Freshman Medical Class of 1914.

(Low music; soft lights; speak it with awe.)

Only one with the wisdom of a Solomon can know how potent the words, how incapable is mere mortal of sounding the praises and chanting the glories thereof. Truly, 'tis a theme worthy the oratory of a Demosthenes, the poetry of a Virgil, or—the examinations of a Dr. Metz.

Time immemorial has ushered into the world countless Freshmen classes—never one like ours. (If you don't believe this, ask some Sophomore.)

For, with the poet, we have hitched our wagons to the stars (our diplomas.)

We are firm believers that the mistakes of progress are worth while. (Witness our mistakes.)

Thus early in our professional lives we have contributed to the medical world discoveries never heard of before. For information concerning this, call on the gentlemen who corrected our histology note-books.

We have investigated the texts used by our different professors, and have no further criticism to offer than that they meet with our full approval. (Professors please note.)

We have decided that life is not one continuous round of rosy-hued dreams and “flowery beds of ease,” but, as yet, we haven't decided what to do about it.

We hope that goodness and mercy will follow us all the days of our lives—also, a few shekels of silver. (Or is a shekel of gold?)

Withal, lest ye forget, we are an earnest class.

We have endeavored to support Tulane in all of her varied activities.

At every meeting of the student body we have tried to lend support by our presence.

In the short time we have had to make history we have striven to glimpse the limitless fields of the work to which we are pledged.

The Freshman Medical Class of 1910. It has come, it has seen. May it conquer.

After the many vississitudes of student life, we find ourselves emerging, after three years, from the wilderness of science where many desperate encounters have been met with and conquered; today we have the exhilarating satisfaction of knowing that we are soon to assume life’s sterner duties.

Going out into the world to battle with ignorance and neglect, daily met with by the dentist, who today is being called upon to solve so many problems emanating from the ill effects of the flood of food concoctions, and the neglect of parents, due to lack of knowledge, that are helping to make us a toothless nation, and for this duty our class has been particularly well equipped.

Ours being the second class to graduate from this department of Tulane, we have not had the time and opportunity to identify ourselves with the University, in a general way, as the older departments have, yet we are not lacking in genius—and we expect unusual developments from this class, in view of the fact, that the studies pursued have been as much in the nature of research as they have to the more practical side of the profession.

To our sister profession, the Medical Department, we will carry many pleasant thoughts of our past cordial relations during our close association.

We leave this institution with our hearts overflowing with gratitude to those who have made it the great institute it is, and our tenderest feelings are extended to those struggling to maintain our department in the exalted position it rightfully holds.

Farewell to old Tulane.

HISTORY.

When the curtain of Tulane University as raised for the opening of the season of 1909-1910, we, the 1912 Class, entered knowing that it would be the first class to be graduated from its doors with the D. D. S. degree. In knowing this the 1912 Class has tried to uphold the dignity of its departments.

The diligence which has been manifested evidences the determination to make the Dental Class of 1912 a record class for the succeeding classes to follow, both in scholarship and athletics. 1912 Class has already furnished the University with two 'Varsity men: McCullogh, who was the star pitcher last year; and Cutrer, who started on the football team this year and also was on the track team. In our first year we had a base-ball team, ably managed by Oser, and captured by McCullogh.

In our first year we elected the following officers: P. Salles, President; R. Corben, Vice-President; F. S. Oser, Secretary; A. Wilson, Treasurer; A. Victor, Historian. We regret to say that Mr. Corben has dropped Dentistry and is now taking up Medicine.

The Tulane-Virginia Debate was held in New Orleans under the auspices of the Tulane Oratorical and Debating Council. This Council was organized several years ago and has become a most virulent representative body in promoting inter-collegiate debates between Tulane and the leading Universities of the South. Through its unending labor and ceaseless vigor, the Council has won for itself the admiration of the student-body and of others interested in debating at Tulane.

The officers of this spirited body are: James G. Heller, Chairman; and Julian S. Waterman, Secretary-Treasurer.

History of the Law Debating Club.

The Law Debating Club has long been one of the leading forensic societies of Tulane University. In the year 1910 a revival was begun and the society reached out into further activities of University life.

Supreme Court trials of a new state of our Union were substituted for the old form of moot court trials, and were conducted throughout the year with ability and success. A few lower court trials were also held, and for both the Club had the congratulations of leading members of the bar.

The Club was also the victor in a debate on the ship subsidy question with the Glendy-Burke Literary Society, and is arranging another to be held this spring.

Last year as well as at present, the Club has given its hearty support to the Tulane Oratorical and Debating Council, and has two members representing it on that body.

This year the same procedure in court trials has been maintained and in a public service question it received the greatest praise from one of the professors.

The Club intends to hold shortly a lower court trial, to be followed by a banquet, and there is every indication of success.

Judging the future by the past, it would seem that the Club has every reason to believe that it will flourish until it is universally recognized as the leading Law Society of the South.

This world—the workshop of a pliant Hand,
That moulds and fashions through the flight of years,
Bears marks of change. The waters yield to land;
The grooved mountain, humbled low, no longer leers
Above the plain; and fertile fields abound
Where dismal winds were wont to chant the dirge
Of passing æons—a wilderness of sound—
Until, o'er all, the works of man emerge.
Yet what of man? Since being was first inspired,
And he endowed to choose of all that's wrought,
One goal by all has ever been desired,
What matters if by diverse methods sought?
We love and loathe; we hope and hate and fear,
In rags, in riches, as peasant or as peer.

Leaves from a Freshman’s Diary.

Oct. 14.—As I expected, it’s a great big place—I got lost four times today; and there are so many stairs.

Some girls here carry styles to extremes. The military cape has quite gone out of style in Greenville (Susie told her mother she just simply would not wear hers this year), and what do you think I saw?—right here at Sallie Slocum! Why, a bunch of girls with black capes that were shirred at the top, and had long, flowing sleeves (an attempt at the butterfly fad, I suppose), and anybody can see they are nothing but last year’s military capes cut over. But that is not all—as Jim would say, “The worst is yet to come”—they had little square caps perched upon their heads, with tassels (TASSELS, dear diary) dangling down in a most annoying fashion. exact counterparts of the hat Janie wore to Sunday-school when she was six! I don’t know why they dress that way. Just to be conspicuous, I suppose, but I consider it most unladylike.

Oct. 15.—I know I must be snobbish, but I can’t help feeling that if ever I get a chance I shall snub those foolish girls. There is one good thing about them though (Ma has always said the most admirable trait of my character was my being able to see the good in even criminals), they seem to stick to themselves. I imagine they are sub-Freshmen, and if they are, thank Heaven I escaped them!

Oct. 23.—Turpentine takes off green paint, but only experience removes natural verdure. They are SENIORS

Give me a sight of thy raven hair,
And a blush from thy rosy cheek;
Give me a smile from thy dimpled chin,
And a sound of thy voice so meek.

Give me the joy of thy rippling laugh,
And the touch of thy little palm;
Give me the love of thy maiden heart,
That feeds thy fairy form.

Give me the good of thy godly soul,
So free from the taint of sin;
Give me the breath of thy simple words,
And the kindness expressed therein.

When thou hast gi'en me all these things,
O rival of Proserpine,
Give me the sumnum bonum of life,
A kiss from thy lips divine.

Outburst of a Dormitory Student on the Reception of a Box of Candy.

When'er you taste the sweeter joys of life,
It is a blissful, dear experience;
But when 'tis gone, your present thoughts and strife,
The beauty and the sweetness all they take from thence.
When your appetite is forced o'er rocks and stones,
To eat of beef and bread and rice and bones,
Your heart in suppliance calls in pond'rous beats;
Its anguish must be satisfied by sweets.
We therefore beg you, in consideration
Of all our daily woes and trials sore,
And our depressing cares and grievous strife
Repeat the self-same blissful operation.
And when you've thought these things and others o'er,
Repeat a deed whose mem'ry lasts through life.

You must wake and call me early, call me early, mother dear,
For tomorrow will be the saddest day of all the college year;
Of all the college year, mother, the saddest, most sorrowful day—
For I'm going to flunk in Latin, mother—of hope I haven't a ray.

There's many a hard exam, mother, but this is the hardest one;
There's Math, and German and Physics, but after they all are done,
In spite of what I've suffered from them in this and in other years,
I'll still say there's none like Latin—and I'll say it 'mid falling tears.

As I was coming home, mother, whom think ye that I saw?
No one but my tormentor herself alighting from the car.
She thought, I know, of how she almost slaughtered me yesterday,
And of how she'll flunk me tomorrow, and what she said today.

All my friends will come with me tomorrow to her room,
And then they'll leave me at the door, alone, to meet my doom;
And students of every department will look in the door and say,
"Poor thing! she's taking her Latin—I see where she flunks today!"

The whole exam room, mother, will be quiet and still as death,
And we poor tortured creatures will scarcely draw our breath;
Yet She in the executioner's chair will glare at us all and say,
"Young ladies, I hear some laughter—no levity here, I pray!"

THE PENALTY.

Breathes there a girl with soul so dead
Who never to herself hath said
"This is my own, my college dear!"
Whose heart hath ne'er within her burned
If such there breathe, you must her hate;
As from her gym class she hath turned
To pass the hour on the campus near.
For her no honors high await.
High though her titles, proud her name,
Boundless her clubs as wish can claim—
Despite those titles, clubs and all
The wretch cut gym to practice ball,
Cutting, shall forfeit all renown
And doubly failing shall go down
To the same class she has vacated.
Uncultured and uneducated!

In Economics.

Is it not extravagant
To wear ties of all the hues,
Brown and grays and purples
And often navy blues?

The gray he wears with sox to match
To form a color scheme,
The brown he wears to match his eyes
To make them browner seem!

The blues he has for “wifey dear”
When to a meeting he must stay,
But first he'll “run and tell my wife
I'll be a little late today!”

No, he is not extravagant
For they fill his human needs,
So by our text-book definition
They are all utilities.

Zanesville, O.

"Beta Theta Pi House at Tulane."
The Collegian’s Sonnet.

When I consider how my time is spent,
And how my mind in studying is bent
Upon the Income Tax, physics, and light.
With which my poor thoughts are now almost rent;
And eighty lines of Plato just for spite,
So I do think who does this sad plea write;
And till the shades of eve for me to stay
To write examinations, which with might
His Majesty has levied on this day,
To see how much on paper I could say;
And this to me the most unkindest cut.
Then say I this to class for coming late:
“Zeroes they give not only to flunks, but
They also serve who only stand and wait.”

In Memory of the Dear Departed.

John Angus, thou art far away,
   Our hearts are sad, we miss thee sore.
This whole past year we've seen thee not,
   Thou lingerest on a distant shore.

No more o'er Newcomb's campus green
   Thou sprintest fast, suit-case in hand.
With neat gray suit and bright red tie—
   Dost wear them still in foreign land?

No more thy gentle voice is heard
   Repeating softly, "As it ware";
Or talking, too, of Papal rice—
   It makes thine absence hard to bear.

There are none left who, full of zeal,
   The locked library door do scale;
The race of heroes ends with thee,
   The more thine absence we bewail.

Unlike thee thy successor is;
   Not knowing girls is his one lack.
We miss thee, but we like him much:
   So, dear John Angus—don't come back!

Just Before the Freshie Takes 'Em.

Then farewell, Cupid—to thy mother fly,
   And in her sacred bosom hide thy head;
Or seek out Psyche for thy passion's eye,
   Perhaps found wandering in a lily bed;
Or look that Proserpine whom Pluto stole
   May cherish more the lord of her sad state;
Or on the Vestal Virgins breathe the coal
   Of burning passion, though it be now late,
That in their hearts may be instilled that love
   Of man, which these sweet, beauteous maidens shun,
And which thou, Cupid, art the master of.
   But seek out others; for myself art done
With thee and thy embraces ever dear,
Until I pass my blamed exams this year.

A Freshman's Lament.

(With apologies to Thomas Moore.)
Once on an autumn night,
Before Sir Sleep had found me
I saw with terrible fright
A bunch of Sophs around me;
With ropes, and masks,
For secret task,
And many plans suggested;
To move along,
With merry song,
O! who could have protested?
We did through fright,
That awful night,
Whatever they demanded.
To join a frat,
And all of that
Is college life expended.
In such a case,
With death to face,
With all of this assistance:
The Kappa Mu,
Would seem to you,
Best frat in existence.
Thus began my Freshman year
The first of my college career.
Thus I met my doom, my fate.
Learned to live, but learned too late.

To ?.

The hours I've spent with thee, cross heart,
Are as a string of slams to me;
I count them over, every one apart,
My Chemistry, my Chemistry.

Each word a slam, each slam a stare,
To make me think my statement wrong;
I write each note unto thy end, and they—
Conclusions drawn.

O summaries that give us pain!
O! "what I see" and do not see!
I write them over many times again,
My Chemistry, my Chemistry.

O HCl and CO₂!
Conclusions that are never right,
"You must be crazy," "Don't be stupid," too,
Is what we hear in speech polite.

Oh, never was a class like this,
So utterly devoid of sense
We may do well in Biology or Greek,
But oh, our poor experiments!

Miss Harkness storms—she's human tho
Miss Reams is fair, we all agree;
Miss Stone is grand—but oh,
My Chemistry, my Chemistry!

An Appeal to Mercy.

Molly, Molly, Ph. D.,
Of me you shall not win renown;
You thought you'd break a student's heart
For pastime in this Southern town.
At me you smiled but, unbeguiled,
I saw your aim and I retired;
The daughter of a dozen scholars,
To take your class I didn't desire.

Molly, Molly, Ph. D.,
About you strange things did I find:
You flunked a Freshman once, Miss Smith,
The thought of her comes to my mind.
You made big eyes and biting replies—
A splendid teacher you may be—
But you put that on her report
Which she did scarcely care to see.

Molly, Molly, Ph. D.,
When first it met her frightened view.
She had those passions of her age,
She said some funny things of you.
Indeed I heard one angry word
That you would scarcely like to hear—
Her manners had not that repose
Which yours, even when you're scolding, bear.

Molly, Molly, Ph. D.,
Hear my wail and take it to heart:
In social ways you're mighty nice—
In class your words prick like a dart.
A teacher, you're beyond reproach;
They learn, the girls who take your class.
But please be nice to us, as well.
And at the end—Oh, let us pass!

A Classy Class of Saw-Bones.

MEDICAL, 1913.

We are a class of Medics
Who can hold our own, I'm sure,
For the Faculty revere us,
And we guarantee our cure.

It matters not what ails you,
We can diagnose your case;
And even were it smallpox
We could read it on your face.

If appendicitis be your lot,
And morbid pain betide,
We'd give you nitric acid
And know just why you died.

We ask ourselves the question,
Why did my patient croak?
The answer is quite simple—
We simply had his goat.

A fellow falls and breaks a leg
And feels quite painful sick;
We splint his limb up tightly
And he ne'er does have a kick.

Complaints come very seldom,
This much can sure be said,
As our patients ne'er have a chance,
For they're either well or dead.

The gouty and the paralyzed,
And those who cannot walk,
We try to liven up a bit,
By a dram of Epsom salts.

Undertakers doff their hats,
Embalmers bend their knee;
The florists too respect us—
They owe us much, you see.

Addison contributed the largest numbers of papers to the Pickwick novels.—Tam O’Shanter is the most pleasing poem that Scott wrote.—Burns tilled the fields in Ireland, studied at Oxford, where he worked for his degree.—The Bard refers to when Edward I. was leading his army across the Alps.—Addison is chiefly known through his poem “Tam O’Shanter” and the “Deserted Village,”—In a sonnet the first line contains eight accented syllables, and in the second line six.—Some of Burn’s noted poems are “To a Rat.” and “Auld Langzyne.”—Plot of Tam O’Shanter: The Bridge was washed a way, Tam falls out of the saddle, catches his horse’s tail and pulls it off, and was drowned.—Burns was born in Dublin; some of his first novels were the “Cooter’s Saturday Night” and “Tam O’Shanter.” Burn’s longest poem was the “Task.”—Addison created a new style which was imitated by all of his predecessors.

Brief History of the Tulane University Club.

On the evening of December 7, 1909, the students and professors of the various departments of the University who are Master Masons met in the Scottish Rite Cathedral, under a call of Brother A. L. Metz to organize the Tulane University Masonic Club. Brother Metz stated the object and purposes of the call, and acted as chairman until a permanent student organization was perfected.

The Most Worshipful Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons was made cognizant of our aims and purposes, and we respectfully petitioned this Ancient and Honorable Body for its approval. This was granted, making us the only Students' Masonic Club in the United States that have received recognition from a Grand Jurisdiction.

Our meetings are well attended, the membership is enthusiastic, and it has been a pleasure of extending aid to worthy and deserving students of the University.

Our meetings are divided into: 1.—Social; 2.—Instruction; 3.—Lectures and research; 4.—Business and benevolent.

The objects and purposes of our organization have appealed to many of the Alumni (who are Masons) of the University. We are growing rapidly and it is our plan to erect upon the University Campus a dormitory and Meeting House, to be known as the Tulane University Masonic Club House.

An excuse, and a bad one at that, generally acts as a banner for the average athlete, but the few lines that follow are going to be the exploding of a few words, or rather a brief sketch, caught from the rear end of a gentle zephyr that escaped from the 1910 load of Tulane’s Balldom. The scattered particles of this “heavenly special” will be analyzed and laid bare, so that the true facts, and not the “ifs,” will shine pre-eminent.

When we found ourselves in the midst of gentle spring, a few words concerning the prospects of a baseball outfit began to fall from the lips of the “live ones.” By degrees the sentences on the subject became as long as those of a lone vaudeville star and soon made their way into the paragraph class.

James Chappell Menefee, the “Dean” of athletics, was elected Manager, and Mr. Houston Bass, also an athlete of prominence, was chosen Captain. Both choices were unanimous. Manager Menefee immediately arranged a schedule that included a road trip of nine games and a series of games at home.

At the first call for practice only a few men reported—studies interfering; the spirit of the preceding year also evidently still had some influence on the candidates, for we had no team in 1909. Many obstacles confronted Menefee and Bass, but through their energetic work these were easily surmounted, and each day there was an overflow of aspirants to don their spangles and report for practice. Three weeks were given to practice, and with only one practice game to our credit, the following members left for Clinton to open up the road schedule: Brown, McCuller, pitchers; Callon and Ponder, catchers; Seiver, J. S. Scott, W. Scott, infielders; Walmsley, Capt. Bass, Peterman and Jones, outfielders. Three games were played with Mississippi College and we lost by the close scores of 6—5, 5—4, 3—1. From there we went to Mississippi A. & M. and were beaten by the “Farmers.” 4—1; “Old Jupe” interfered with the playing of the two other games. Leaving Harkisville, we jumped to Oxford and played a series with the University of Mississippi, the “Champion of the South,” where we lost two games and tied one. 4—0, 4—2, 8—8; terminating the road trip.

These defeats somewhat discouraged the boys and as one more series was left, and that with Texas, they determined to win, and wipe out the memories of lost games on the road.

A week elapsed and plenty of practice was put in and close attention given to the weak spots, mainly the deficiency in not playing together, and in the meantime also cultivating a taste for “inside” baseball. As a result we beat Texas three straights by scores of 4—3, 4—3, 1—0, fulfilling the determination and showing what persistency will accomplish.

Comparative scores show that we ranked among the best teams in the South. I base my assertion on this fact, that Louisiana State University beat Mississippi University, the Champions, a series, and Texas won three straight from Louisiana State University.
TRACK TEAM RECORDS.

National A. A. U. Meet.

The National A. A. U. championships were held at New Orleans, October 14 and 15. Tulane had four men entered in the Junior events. Menefee finished second in the broad jump, Chase finished third in the mile, Doswell finished fifth in the 440 and 220, and Walmsley started in the 440, but did not finish.

Harrison County Fair Meet.

An A. A. U. meet was held at Gulfport, Miss., in connection with the Harrison County Fair, in which Tulane finished second, with 21 points. Doswell won the 440, and finished third in the 220, Love won the high jump, Chase finished second in the mile, Wilkinson finished second in the 880, D’Hemecourt finished third in the high jump and discus; Smith finished third in the 100, and Morris finished third in the broad jump. Harris, Reider, Schmidt, Jenks and Le Blanc also entered.

The College Vampire.

(From the visitor's point of view. As suggested by a dinner at the Refectory.
(With apologies to Kipling.)

A student there was and he made his thrust
(Even as you and I.)
For a plate and a bone and a hunk of crust,
(We called it the food which did not appease),
But the student he used it his hunger to please,
(Even as you and I.)

Oh, the ham we had and the jam we had,
And the work of our jaw and hand,
Belong to the dinner which did not appease
(And now we know that it could never appease)
And never did gratify.

A student there was and his efforts he spent,
(Even as you and I.)
Labor and strength and a good intent
(And it wasn't the least what the dinner meant),
But a hungry student must follow his bent,
(Even as you and I.)

Oh the toil we waste and the moil we waste,
And the excellent things we planned,
Belong to the dinner that didn't appease
(And now we know that it never appeased)
And did not gratify.

The student of course had a good appetite,
(Even as you and I.)
Which might have been lost with the food in sight
(But it isn't on record the student tried),
So he most of it ate but some of it eyed—
(Even as you and I.)

And it isn't the beans and it isn't the peas
That makes him eat like a fiend,
It's knowing the dinner could never appease
(Seeing at last it could never appease)
And could never gratify.

THE KREWE OF ANANIAS.

This famous organization, founded at Tulane in the early part of the twentieth century by one of the arch-priests, Theodore Roosevelt, had lain dormant for several years on account of the anti-religious movement started by Dr. Levi Wantthechapelattendanceincreased Wilkinson; but as this movement has died out, so much good material was found at Tulane that the Krewe was reorganized with the aid of the two charter members—Prof. Have-one Have-another Strauss and Dr. Samuel Jumpathechance Barnett.

Just find out how these chateaux burned,
And why the mob to Paris turned.
Where shall you look? It’s time you learned
To go to H. Marr Stephen.

Where shall I look for Chaucer’s life,
And Byron’s troubles with his wife?
The answer, cutting as a knife,
Comes. “Look in H. Marr Stephen.”

I’ve Greek and Latin words to find,
And German to plant in my mind;
But then I can find them intertwined
With French in H. Marr Stephen.

This general fact is in what book?
I’ve searched in every library nook.
My Heavens! I quite forgot to look
For it in H. Marr Stephen.

Moral: Throughout each college year,
A panacea for every tear.
For every woe—oh, cease to fear!—
Abides in H. Marr Stephen.

N. B.—In case this book cannot be procured, the Cambridge Modern History, Volume VIII. answers much the same purpose and is really an excellent substitute.

The Misfortune Club.

Conscious of the fact that every thing and body are organizing a club, we do hereby organize the Misfortune Club, in which the members can condole with one another. Any student with a full-grown misfortune may join. As Dr. Ransmeier has had the greatest misfortune of all—a knowledge of the German language—he is the High Priest. The following are the charter members, with their misfortunes attached:

Dr. Ransmeier—Too much Deutscher Verein.
Adlai Gladden—Too much appetite.
John O'Keefe—Too many ladies.
Charles Turck—Too many offices.
Abe! Rios—Too much work.
James Heller—Too much "Hot Air."
Dormitory Freshmen—Too much Kappa Kappa Mu.
Sam Levine—Too much good time.
Leopold Meyer—Too much like a Freshman.
William Butts—Too much Arkansas.

This society is the worthy successor of the Deutscher Verein, the most unfortunate society in the history of the University. We hope that it will meet with a better fate.

On Leaving Tulane.

It is over; my college course is ended and I am sad. Who would not be on leaving behind the days so much enjoyed?

No more may I work upon the track, and strive with all my might to win Tulane a point. Foot-ball, base-ball, no more; the sweets of victory nor the stings of defeat shall I feel again. Fraternity meetings, club meetings, and the like belong to other days; but the time there spent and the friends there made can never be forgotten. I enjoyed it all. Contact with students, professors and coaches was pleasant and instructive. But it is over; loved ones must part. * * * Good-bye, Tulane. I owe you much; I'll always sing your praises.

The Faculty.

(O Rudyard, dear, forgive us for such irreverence!)

I've taken my fun where I found it.
I've cut and I've flunked in my time;
I've had my picking of teachers,
And four of the lot were prime.
One was the gym professor,
One paths of English did tread,
One was the Latin instructor,
And the last came from Vassar, 'tis said.

Now, I'm really no hand with the teachers,
For, taking them all along,
You never can tell till you've tried them,
And then you are like to be wrong.
There are times when you think they're finished with you,
But you are never out of their mind,
And the things you can learn from your teachers
Will help you a lot with mankind.

I was a student at Newcomb,
Naturally didn't know much;
A disciple of Baron Nils Posse
Taught me chestweights and such.
Easiest mark in the College,
Beside her the rest fiendish were,
Showed me the way to make cutting like play,
And—I learned about teachers from her.

Then I became a grave Sophomore,
Though really I was quite a dunce;
And chummed with the "Great English Writers"
Through taking the regular stunts.
The teacher was quick, without mercy,
Unlike her all the rest were:
I studied, perforce, to keep up with her course,
And—I learned about teachers from her.
All through my long years at college
I've been keeping up Latin, my dear;
And a Ph.D., its instructor,
Has caused me many a tear.
Taught me the old Romans' writings,
"Like a volcano she were,"
She flunks me each day in a merciless way,
But—I've learned about teachers from her.

Now I go up to the third floor
Day after day with a sigh;
Chemistry, simple or complex,
Sometimes makes me yearn to die.
Oft have the girls blessed her out—
Enraged by her language they were—
But I wouldn't do such, 'cause I like her too much,
And—I've learned about teachers from her.

I've taken my fun where I found it,
And now I must pay for it all,
For the more you cut and miss, dear friend,
The nearer you are to a fall.
And the end of it's dreaming and fearing,
And wond'ring what your grades will be;
So be warned by my lot (which I know you will not)
And—learn about teachers from me.

Ode to a Freshman Schedule Card.

A book of German underneath the bough,
And all my texts—a match-box—and thou
Beside them, SINGEING in the Wilderness,
Oh! Wilderness were Paradise enow!
THAT MOTHER TONGUE OF OURS.

Miss S.: “And after all, we have the umlaut in the English language. For instance—Foot, feet; goose, geese; mice, me—er. (Hastily) Will you continue your sentence, Miss B?”

"AND THINGS ARE NOT AS THEY SEEM."

Wise Teacher—“In the sentence ‘Carl, not finding his book, looked under the table for it,’ what case should follow the preposition ‘under’?”
Accurate Guesser—(rashly) “Dative!”
Wise Teacher—“Why?”
Accurate Guesser—(A trifle perplexed): “Because—because—(then triumphantly) because the book says, ‘when in doubt, use the dative.’”

WHAT FOOLS WE MORTALS BE.

German Teacher: “A great many German words sound very much like the English ones. Miss X, will you illustrate that, please?”
Shy Little Girl: “I know two that are strikingly similar.”
German Teacher (impatiently): “Well, what are they?”
Shy Little Girl: (Very pink but emphatic) “Damit! Hell!”

I have swung on the bar like a monkey,
I have climbed up a ladder like him,
And Miss Baer is quite pleased with my antics,
And says she will put me in trim,
But I’m getting lamentably slim.
Oh, quite unbecomingly slim!
There is a Professor named Mann,
Who works in the "Ving" all he can:
   He has oceans of dogs,
   But on pithing the frogs
He is really a pippin, this Mann.

And then there's another, Couret,
Who grows all the bugs he can get.
   And for all that I know,
   Be the growth fast or slow,
He is probably growing them yet.

When Prof. Halsey lectures,
   He races up and down,
And no one can conjecture
   Why he always wears his frown.

Whatever troubles P. Frank had.
   He never would get sore.
If a fellow came to lecture
   And rudely slammed the door.

Dr. Metz is much about,
   And knows his boys quite well,
He'll recognize them 'thout a doubt
   In Heaven, Earth or Hell.

Duval's the head of the "Spieling" Club,
   A body of much renown,
He talks forever, night or day,
   He'll talk the best 'o them down.

Prof. Mann: "Mr. Wicker, vill you be so kind as to come down here to show the class what your extensive knowledge is?"
Wicker (On top row of lecture room): "Do you want me to come down?"
Prof. Mann: "Vell, of course. Do you vant me to come up?"

A dog from a very punk show,
Was killed by a street car, you know:
   The villain then said,
   With a toss of his head,
"The show's lost a barker—Ho! Ho!"

The Little Cooker.

"Alas!" she cried,
The dear little lass,
A member was she
Of the Cooking Class.

"A weary life
For a month I've led;
I've cooked and cooked
'Till I'm almost dead."

"I've burnt my fingers,
And burnt my clothes,
And for burning cooking
Why Goodness knows!"

"I've burned the cabbage,
And scorched the beans:
I've ruined a ton
Of mustard greens."

"And biscuits, too—
But be it said
I never have burned
A loaf of bread."

"But for that fact,
I can have no praise:
For the sticky old stuff
Would never raise."

"And all my life
It has been just so:
I've never been able
To raise the dough."

"Six cups of flour,
A lemon or two—
My Goodness, when
Will I ever be through?"

"I'm going to quit!
Even teacher's cakes
Are not a bit
Like my mother makes."

"So when I marry
I'll capture a man
Who's strong and healthy,
And I think can—"

"Live on in spite
Of all that I do,
'Till I learn to cook
Like my mother used to."

ROB'T. WILL BURST.
ANNA MAY BURST.
Once upon a midnight dreary, I did ponder much and weary.
Over many a quaint and curious volume of forgotten lore—
I did sit there never halting, nor census was ever plodding—
Plodding nor, and for some more—ever that did forgotten lore,
Over the books I did abhor—plodding nor unto everyone—
Only that and nothing more.

Ah! most truly I may say, it was in the sultry May,
And each bright electric ray brought its gleam upon the floor.
Vampyly I did dream the morrow; eagerly I sought to borrow
From my books sacres of sorrow—sorrow for forgotten lore—
For that lurking, leaped love which professes so alone—
Forgotten now you everyone.

The Freshmen's Prayer.

Dr. Zapp, the Tulane Freshman Philosopher.
The Mystery of the Hot Air; or, Sherlock Holmes Again on the Job.

It was a cloudy day in Jucember. Holmes and I were seated in our lodging-house on Audubon St., in the city of the Logical Point. I was deeply interested in the translation of a book written by Dr. Mann upon "The Proteolosis and Hydrolysis of the Proteins from an Enzymological Standpoint."

I had just succeeded in forming a fair idea of what the title meant, when a sigh from Holmes caused me to look up. Holmes was just back from Africa, where he had been banished by several aspiring authors upon a search for an extinct number of the Tulane Weekly. He had carried the hunt to a successful conclusion, being killed three times and murdered four, and resurrected at least eight times by a tribe of unscrupulous publishers. So it was only natural to suppose that Holmes was bored with the quiet life of New Orleans, and I knew it to be a fact a moment later, for he reached for the steel faucet connecting with the cistern of cocaine at the back of the house.

He thrust the point in his arm and allowed several gallons to flow in before stopping the valve.

"Well, Watson," he cried, turning to me, "let us take a little walk. Perhaps we will meet a member of the Deutscher Verein, so you had better put your revolver in your pocket."

In a few moments we were out on St. Charles Avenue, swinging along in that familiar English stride employed by Prof. Jones, and which bade fair to carry us to Canal Street before the street cars, when we ran into a current of air as hot as a blast furnace.

We were passing Gibson Hall, the main building of Tulane University, at the time, and as soon as I felt the current of air, I at once stopped in surprise.

But the way Holmes acted was entirely different. He dropped to his knees as if shot, and, hurriedly unpacking his microscope, seized a few footprints near by and began examining them for clues.

In a few moments he arose and, laying his long bony nose along his forefingers, he looked at me and said:

"Watson, the more I think of this current of air, the more and more I am convinced that there must be something causing it."

The suddenness with which he propounded this conundrum left me entirely speechless, and I could only gaze with awe upon the great detective who had attracted the attention of the kings of Europe, and even Dr. Alcee Fortier.

But Holmes continued: "Watson, we must eliminate the different things that could cause it."

"It might be a volcano," I ventured. The great detective frowned.

"Watson! Watson!" he cried; "you know if a volcano were erupting, Prof. Woodward would be here painting it long ago."

"But he could not paint an earthquake," I triumphantly cried.

"No," he squintled; "but Dr. Beyer would have captured it and placed it in the Museum long ago."

"Well, perhaps some of Dr. Metz's radium is lost and——"

"Wrong again. When Dr. Metz loses any radium, it will be a cold, cold day, Watson."

"Well, then," I said, "I give it up, unless the heat is coming from a Faculty meeting."

"Now you are talking, Watson," affirmed Holmes. "Suppose we investigate."

Grasping our faithful pickaxes firmly by the back, we started on our journey, but in a few steps I stumbled over the unconscious form of the night-watchman.

He had been evidently bent over the same errand, and his sturdy English form not standing the pressure, he lay on the sod, quite broke, a striking example to anyone who wished to investigate a Faculty meeting.

"Holmes," cried I, "this poor unfortunate has met with foul play."

"Well, Watson, he got it in the neck all right, but I think we can guard ourselves against any such interruptions."

As Holmes said this, he drew two moss covered objects from his pocket, and said:

"You see, Watson, I always carry some of Dr. Aldrich's jokes around with me. When armed with these, no one will approach me of his own free will. Just hang this around your neck, and we will get into the building all right."

"Now, then," continued Holmes, "as I do not wish to be interrupted by the local authorities, we had better get rid of the watchman."

So saying, he pulled the sun-dial up by the roots, and after tying the watchman hand and foot with it, we once more proceeded on our way.

In a few moments we were at the door of Gibson Hall, and, with the aid of the keys which Holmes had intentionally left in the watchman's pockets, we pulled the keyhole out, and through this gap we crawled.

The heat was terrific; even the wood was scorching, and as I caught a whiff of an uncanny odor, I looked at Holmes and found that he was smoking.

That unnerved me so much that I turned my gaze upon the pictures. The much-admired one at the entrance, which is thought by many to be a portrait of Paul Tulane, or of Doctor Smith, was feverishly mopping his brow, and in excited Crapaud was saying that if he had thought they would make it so warm for him, he would never have founded the University; while the steamboats in the other portrait had got up stream and were now out of sight up the river.

And it was undoubtedly hot. The heat waves striking the walls set up vibrations which resounded throughout the hall, forming chords and passages as though some huge Plutonian organ were playing a welcoming march to celebrate the arrival of another ship-load of coal at Styx harbor.

But we hadn't time to think of matters like these, if we wished to emerge from that frightful holocaust alive, and I turned to Holmes to find out what to do.

But that worthy was quite undaunted. He calmly took two icicles from his coat pocket, and unrolled them. Taking the loose end, he wrapped himself up in one and motioned me to do likewise with the other.

Once we were protected in this manner, the heat was scarcely felt; but as we turned to go a noise from the wall attracted my attention, and I turned and found that Paul Tulare had climbed out of his picture, and was industriously painting a snow scene on the canvas.

This done, he crawled in again, and winking at me in that pretty Creole fashion, he began to say something. As I could hear nothing, I looked at the floor, and found that the heat had melted his words, and they were trickling through a knothole.

It was the first time I had heard the liquid tones so often spoken of by the poets, and thinking that Prof. Fortier would like to see it, I gathered up a few handfuls, but, being very volatile French, they soon evaporated.

At this moment Holmes touched me on the shoulder. "Well, Watson," he cried, "my thermometer shows me the heat comes from the Assembly Hall. Let us go there."

The heat grew more and more intense as we drew closer to the Assembly Hall, but our icicles protected us very well.

At the door of the Greek room we stumbled over something, and upon investigating, found it was the body of Prof. Strauss. He was quite dead, being nearly burned to a char.

Holmes bent over to examine him. "Quite dead," said he.

"I suppose," I ventured, "he died like a good Greek."

"Well, Watson," sniggered Holmes. "If you mean he fried in his own beloved Grease, you are quite correct."

With a sob of strangled emulsion, I pulled the Assembly Hall door open, and behold—the mystery was solved.

Upon a rostrum stood a student, explaining to an assembled audience, that unless an income tax was levied upon the inhabitants of the United States and Arkansas, the Germans would, at an early date, better us in the production of sauer-kraut.

I at once understood that the Tulane preliminary debates were on, and taking care not to attract the attention of anyone in the room, we hastily left the building.

"That only proves," said Holmes when we were again in the open air, "that every defect has its cause."

"I don't see what that has to do with the mystery of the hot air," I cried.

"Tush, Watson! said Holmes, lighting his cigarette, "did you not see Dr. Aldrich there?"

"Oh!"

Behind the Scenes.

Faculty Room. 4 o’clock in the afternoon, a spring day.
One long table, chairs around it.
Signs on the wall:

“God Bless Our Gymnasium.”
“After the Meeting go to DEL CORRAL.”
“Cursing positively forbidden.”
“Tie the Bull outside.”
“Keep your feet off the table.”
“No sleeping allowed—snoring annoys the speaker.”

(Room has an air of weariness and lassitude.)

William (a negro porter with a baboon-like countenance): Lord God! ain’t this Faculty ever goin’ to meet? they got no more show to get a quorum than the Glendy-Burke.

Voice in the Distance (reminding one of Tennyson’s cat-like wail in the opening lines of “Rizpah”): O William, William, come out to me.

William: Dat man Datz callin’ me again; must want me to tote some books for him. Dis obnoxious disquietude am harassing me nerves. I think I’ll design from this here employment. (William shuffles out with undue amount of noise, and enters soon with Secretary Datz, who is a cross between Taft and Falstaff. Owing to their combined efforts, they are able to bring in a ponderous volume, soon to be filled with forgotten lore.)

William (after regaining his breath from his ardent struggle, and gasping out in a nervous manner): Cap, is they goin’ to fill anodder book at this meeting?

Datz (with a bored look on his face): Yes, remember Dean Miller is going to talk.

William (still gasping, pouring out in a mournful tone his sympathy): Mr. Datzes, I’s pityes yonce.

Datz (in the resigned manner of one prepared to meet his fate): William, that is all.

William: “Tank de Lord!” (Hurries away to stamp through the Library and slam windows, knock over statuary, and irritate by his fierce career and mighty wrecks the Sensitive Plant, Miss Bell.)

Datz: That negro is getting almost as flip as Dr. Fortier.

Dr. Aldrich, with his laissez faire heard, enters cautiously and peers around like a professional pickpocket, for he is looking around for scrap paper to pad his lecture notes.

Datz (evidently annoyed by the Doctor’s asinine actions, yells out in a Stentorian voice): You here?

Dr. Aldrich (in a blasé manner): No. I am singing that song, “Every Little Tombstone Has a Meaning of its Own,” out in the cemetery. Don’t you like my voice?

Datz (somewhat abashed by the witty repartee, replies in a dociile tone):

Good place to waste your time.

Dr. Aldrich: I had nothing to do, so I thought I would come to the Faculty meeting. Is that irritable old German going to be here?

Datz: Both Germans are irritable; which one of the wretches are you referring to?
Dr. Aldrich: I mean Dr. Beyer; you see what I am driving at; I haven't been here in six years.

Datz: That is nothing; neither has Beyer.

Ransmeier (the avoirdupois individual of the Faculty and famous because he is proclaimed far and wide as the "Hope of the White Race"; it is said of him he can worry any man to death in ten minutes with his German patois): This peculiar specimen walks or rather drags himself around the room with the air of a German bear. In the meanwhile Datz and Aldrich skip under the table.

Dr. Fortier enters. In his high, piping voice screeches out: OOU—Good evening, Mister Aldrich. I have not seen you in a long while. Where have you been?

Aldrich: I have been asleep on my couch.

Fortier (in his stupid French way): All these six years?

Datz bœts out: Allow me to congratulate you on being elected to the Legion of Honor.

Fortier (baughtily inverting his Alpine goatee): Do not congratulate me—congratulate the Legion of Honor.

Ransmeier (waking up and looking stern and dark like the mouth of a German beer stein): Was iss das? Dunner Vetter! (Goes out.)

Aldrich (with cherubic innocence): What's the matter with him?

Datz (still volunteering information): Nothing; he is going to get married.

He left his hat, however.

Enter Saint Wilkerson with stolen Bible, Caldwell with chemical apparatus discarded by him, but which he will feed to the children when he gets home, and Barnett with overcoat and umbrella.

Caldwell stands over table and pours liquid from one tube to another and back again; the liquid spills into a hat on the table.

Caldwell (face lighting up like an electric sign): Wonderful! It's all disappeared. What have I discovered? Now by Avogadro's hypothesis—(walks off in the corner, scratching his head.)

Ransmeier (awakened from his lethargy by having fallen down the steps, bursts into the room, disturbing the languid air with his coarse dialect): Where is my hat? (Picks it up and puts it on his head; liquid spilled by Caldwell trickles down the neck of the irate professor.) Good Lord! My head! I bet Fortier did this. Shades of the Franco-Prussian War!

Wilkerson (with the rest does not regard the actions of the frantic German, for it has become habitual with him, says): This is an outrage. Here is a petition from the undesirable addition to our college, the students, asking that we appropriate a fund to move Del Corral nearer the Campus, so they can get to their classes on time. What can they do with so much ice water? don't we furnish them enough?

Barnett (with tormenting sweetness): Dear me! If they were only as afraid of water as I am.

Dean Miller: Well, that is all settled by the Legislature; for no saloon can get a license within five miles of a university after this year.

Aldrich: Well, then, we will have to move Tulane back in the woods.

Craighead with his senorous voice approaches singing the Tulane war-cry—"For Tulane has a bigger campus than Harvard, for Tulane has a bigger campus than Yale, for Tulane has a bigger campus than Princeton, for Tulane has a climate that permits open air athletics the whole year, for Tulane de-di-do-de-dum.

(Curtain.)

A Judicious Use of Material.

When Betty Wilson was eighteen and a Sophomore at college, she met Neal Fenton, who was twenty-two and wandering with charming impartiality between courses in the Academic, Medical and Law Departments, with no idea of taking a degree in any one of them. His object, as he would have told you upon the first opportunity, was to study human nature, more especially the human nature which abounds in college students. He was by way of being a short-story writer, you would understand, a satisfying cross between O. Henry and Robert W. Chambers, and at some not far distant date he was to try his hand at the great American novel. He hinted his aspirations in that line with a most engaging frankness. If by this time you had not managed your escape, he would have proceeded to enlighten you as to his methods, of which it suffices to say that he believed in writing only of what he knew at first hand, and his quest of experience was everlasting.

Betty, being a Sophomore and so an important factor in the life of the University, crossed his path soon after his arrival, and because she had wide blue eyes, in a delicately flushed face, and soft hair that would not stay caught back under its net, he turned for a third glance at her. The first and second he accorded everyone. Betty he found attractive after the third, and in his usual calm, business-like way sought further acquaintance. During the winter that followed he was in close attendance. A careful study of the art of rushing had won him success in previous instances and assured it in this. Betty, you are to understand, was the ingenue that the features mentioned have indicated. She was charmingly trusting and naive. Mendelssohn's Spring Song was her favorite melody and Watts' "Galahad" hung in the place of honor over her desk.

And Neal was, after all is said, an artist of his kind. He wore delightfully conventional clothes, which were, if anything, a trifle too reminiscent of the Taylor catalogue, and an invitation to the theater from him meant always a box of roses and seats in the fifth row center of the orchestra. Likewise, he remembered St. Valentine's Day and the first of May and included books of verse among his offerings. Yes, undoubtedly Neal was an artist. And Betty was very deeply appreciative. She smothered violently and instantly the faintest stirring of interest which she seemed to feel with regard to various foot-ball heroes whom she met. She wore Neal's frat pin very loyally over her heart, and when she left for Canada in the early summer, she wrote regularly and responsively in answer to the masterpieces of epistolary art which Neal achieved. As the summer grew apace her letters increased, if anything, in fervency. They were really as artistic in their way, the expression of an ingenue's character, as Neal's were in his.

But the sad fact is that Neal eventually neglected to answer one. He was deeply interested in the study of a married flirt just at that time, and the little blue note with the splash of gold sealing-wax upon it escaped his memory altogether. It was followed shortly by another, lamenting the uncertainty of the mails. That one, I think, he lost, and the one that came next was thrown into the waste-basket by mistake. There were no more after that, and Neal did not go back to college in the fall.
Now, in the course of time, five years perhaps, Neal sold, among others, a story which was remarkably good. In it there figured an ingenue, and her character was unusually well drawn by the old trick of inserted letters, letters written by the ingenue to a man whom she eventually married. There were a great many flattering things said to the author of the story on the score of his character work and the author was very proud. He naturally would have been. And when a pretty lady whom he met at a dinner-party one night while playing lion was particularly loud in her praises, he was almost prepared to accept what she might say unquestioningly and as his due.

"How wonderful it must be," she murmured, raising her lashes in a way that fascinated the lion, "how delightful to think that you can make real people out of words, out of mere ugly little black letters! How very, very proud you must be of what you have done!"

In the light of her eyes, which were remarkably blue, the lion lost a great part of his superiority and became a mere stuttering man.

"You will succeed in making me very vain, in any case," he managed to say, "but you exaggerate, really.

The lady would not hear to this. "We are not going to let you be modest," she declared; "that is, I have always heard, a way of geniuses. But you must tell me how you do it—how you see so clearly and so sympathetically. One would not believe that a man had written the letters in which you show us the girl of your story!"

Something, a trick of lifted brows when she spoke, struck the lion as very familiar, but he had missed her name in the introduction and just as he seemed on the point of placing the resemblance, she raised her eyes suddenly and disconcertingly to his and he was forced to speak.

"It is very easy," he managed to say, "for between the words he was still trying to remember; "one meets an individual, hears her talk, watches her movements, diagnoses the case, states it clearly—it is really more mechanical, more scientific than you would perhaps think."

"Then you knew a girl," said the pretty lady, "who was the ingenue of your story? How very interesting!" and she smiled engagingly, her eyes widening with the interest she declared. The lion frowned slightly under the annoyance of the elusive memory.

"But the letters," said the lady; "you were able to write them and mirror the girl and her ideals simply by scientific methods? It is marvelous. You have no idea how interested I am."

The lion stirred uneasily. And because the lady was such an altogether attractive lady he resented the slight falsity of his position.

"No," he said; "I told you you exaggerated. As it happens, the letters are real. A girl wrote them. I merely made judicious use of the material at hand."

"'Judicious use!'" mocked the lady, with an effective little shudder. "How very cold you sound! And how very honest you have been! But didn't the girl mind having her letters published that way?"

"No," said the lion, trilling very easily with the truth, "she didn't mind. Besides, I haven't seen her for some years." He was once more upon the trail of the memory, but it was the curl over her ear that suggested it now.

"I should think," said the lady softly, "that she would have minded very much. I think she was a very loyal, trusting girl, and when she wrote to a man in that childish frank way of hers, she must have thought that he would care for and treasure the letters as much as she did the thoughts she put into them. I think it must have hurt her cruelly to find that she was being made copy of—to see her most sacred feelings staring up at her from the pages of
The lady’s eyes were suspiciously misty. There was a queer little tremor in her voice that overwhelmed the lion with sudden conviction. The pretty lady spoke softly: “That,” she said, “is, of course, only how it would seem to me.”

“And you,” said the lion, with the courage of his conviction, “should certainly know. I see that in your eyes I have been rather a brute. My punishment, I suppose, will be only my due.”

The pretty lady laughed quite merrily at that.

“What a very long time it took you to remember me,” she said; “that was not nice of you either.” Her voice became sweetly reproachful. “And are you truly repentant?” she asked. “Do you realize what you may have done? broken a girl’s heart, embittered her youth, taken the joy and the faith and the love that were hers—and thrown them away like worthless things. Do you realize all this?”

The lion watched her uncertainly, and because he was a very young lion, he was only suspicious of the melodrama in her voice.

“I think,” he said, “that I am beginning to realize, but I am quite repentant. Do you think that you can forgive me? Isn’t it possible for me to give you back what you say I have taken away?”

Betty Wilson, or the pretty lady (whichever you choose to call her), held up a protesting hand.

“No—no,” she begged, “I did not say you had taken them away; I said you might have, if you remember. For I have all those things: a heart—the useful organ is in quite its proper place; my youth—surely you are not going to question that? joy, and faith, and love—I am to be married within the month.” She rose, laughing, and held out her hand.

“I was only warning you,” she said; “be careful that your ‘judicious use of material’ does not lead to more fatal consequences next time.”

“Then you did not mind about the letters,” said the lion, and added because he was a man, “the ones that slipped my memory?”

“I did not mind them,” said the pretty lady, who was Betty. “You see, I did not write them after the first month; I had a cousin, a girl of my own age, who liked to try her hand at that sort of thing. When I grew tired—it was very easy, she wrote the letters and I copied them. You must meet her—she is quite a genius in her way.”

A very furious lion, who was Neal Fenton, bowed politely, if stiffly, and a laughing pretty lady, who was Betty Wilson, nodded gaily and was gone.

US'NS NEVER HAVE NO TROUBLE US'NS DON'T

You are cordially invited to attend a pink tea this afternoon. R.S.V.P. Room 8
TULANE UNIVERSITY
OF LOUISIANA
NEW ORLEANS

EDWIN BOONE CRAIGHEAD, LL.D., D.C.L., President.

The University, in all its departments, is located in the City of New Orleans, the metropolis of the South. The are ten Departments, with twenty-three buildings. Modern Dormitories, extensive Laboratories, Libraries, and Museums.

THE ACADEMIC COLLEGES, comprising the College of Arts and Sciences and College of Technology, offer full courses in Literature, Science, Architecture, and all branches of Engineering. Many scholarships in the Academic Colleges are open to high school graduates.

THE NEWCOMB COLLEGE for Young Women, located in Washington Avenue, in the best residential district, offers full courses in Literature, Science, and Art.

THE ART DEPARTMENT of Newcomb College offers every facility for the study and practice of Industrial and Fine Arts, with Picture Galleries and an Art Library.

THE TEACHERS' COLLEGE offers both practical and theoretical training for superintendents and principals and teachers of high and elementary schools, with a course leading to the degree of Bachelor of Arts in Education.

THE GRADUATE DEPARTMENT, open to graduates of approved colleges, offers advance courses leading to degrees of A.M., M.E., C.E., and Ph.D. A number of Fellowships are awarded annually.

THE LAW DEPARTMENT offers a three-years course leading to the degree of Bachelor of Laws and prepares students for admission to the Bar not only of this State, but in any of the Common Law States.

THE PHARMACY DEPARTMENT offers scientific training in Pharmacy, Drugs and Food Analysis, with superior Laboratory facilities.

THE MEDICAL DEPARTMENT (Undergraduate), the oldest Medical College in the Southwest, offers unequalled clinical and anatomical advantages. The Hutchinson Memorial and the great Charity Hospital are open to the students of this Department.

THE POST-GRADUATE MEDICAL DEPARTMENT (New Orleans Polyclinic), open to licensed practitioners, affords unusual clinical facilities for the study of diseases. Instruction is carried on at the Polyclinic, at the Charity Hospital, and at the Eye, Ear, Nose, and Throat Hospital.

DENTAL DEPARTMENT (New Orleans College of Dentistry), with every modern equipment and unusual clinical advantages, this Department offers for the study of Dentistry unexcelled opportunities.

Winchester
Repeating Shotguns
USED IN THE U. S. ARMY.
The U. S. Army authorities know a gun; that is why, when they decided to equip some troops with repeating shotguns, they selected the Winchester in preference to all other makes. The experts of the U. S. Ordnance Board also know a gun; that's why, after submitting a Winchester Repeating Shotgun to all sorts of tests, they pronounced it safe, sure, strong and simple. If you want a shotgun—buy the one whose strength and reliability led the U. S. Army authorities to select it and the U. S. Ordnance Board to endorse it—that's the Winchester.
